PREFACE.

DESCRIPTION OF FORMER EDITIONS, AND OF THE MSS.

§ 1. THE present edition of "Pierce the Ploughmans Crede" may fairly be said to be almost entirely a new one ; the Text being new throughout, as is also a large part both of the Notes and Glossary. In order to explain whence this new text is derived, it will be proper to give, first of all, an account of former editions.

§ 2. I. The first edition, and the most important, is that of 1553. The title-page contains solely the words "Pierce the Ploughmans Crede" within a square space in the midst of a wood-cut illustrating the story of Pyramus and Thisbe ; the picture being by no means unsuitable for Chaucer's version of the poem. The wood-cut is clearly of continental workmanship, and a copy of the lower part of it, not very well executed, may be seen at p. 96 of "A book of Roxburghe Ballads," edited by J. P. Collier ; 1847. The colophon, on a separate leaf, is—IMPRINTED AT LONDON BY REYNOLD WOLFE, ANNO DOMINI M.D.LIII. It was no doubt issued owing to the success of "The Vision of Piers Ploughman," which had been printed by Robert Crowley, in 1550 ; and considering the tone of the poem, we may safely conclude that it was issued in the early part of the year 1553, while Edward VI. was still alive ; for he died on the 6th of July in that year. The reign of Mary was not favourable to its existence, and copies are now very scarce.¹ I have made use of a copy preserved in the Cambridge University Library, and readings from this are denoted in the foot-notes by the letter C. It consists of only 16 leaves, 4to.

II. Elizabeth having succeeded Mary, the poem was again in request. The title-page of the second edition has on it merely the words "Pierce the Ploughmans Crede," and no more, the wood-cut having disappeared. It was printed at the same time as "The vision of Pierce Plowman," and often bound up with it ; and we learn from the title-page of the longer poem that it was "Imprynted at London, by Owen Rogers, dwellyng neare vnto great Saint Bartelmewes Gate, at the sygne of the spred Egle. ¶ The yere of our Lorde God, a thousand, fyue hundred, threscore and one. The .xxi. daye of the Moneth of Februarye."¹ This edition of 1561 is simply a reprint of that of 1553, and clearly not copied from the MS. It preserves the misprints of the first edition, and adds more to the number ; and is therefore considerably inferior to it.

III. In 1814, Dr Whitaker reprinted the first edition of 1553. His object was clearly to produce an exact copy of it, and he accordingly used black-letter type and such various marks of contraction as appeared in the old book. It may be considered as a great success, as it accurately reproduces every peculiarity, every misprint, and every stop and mark ; so that any one who wishes to have a good copy of the first edition may safely buy this instead, at a far lower price.² I have carefully collated these two, and here give the few corrections which any one who buys Whitaker's edition should make.

In the address "to the Reader," last line, the J should be an I.

Fol. C ij, l. 5 from bottom, the words "more money" are, in the oldest edition, run together into one.

Fol. D iij, l. 15 ; for "swich" read "swhich."

Fol. D iij, back, l. 7 ; for "swich" read "swhich."

Id. l. 21 ; for "And" read "Any."

² The title-page bears—"Pierce the Ploughman's Crede. London. Reprinted by T. Bensley, Bolt Court, Fleet Street, for Lackington, Allen and Co., Finsbury Square ; and Robert Triphook, St James's Street. 1814.

Fol. D iij, l. 10 ; for “laiche” read “latche ;” though the t in the old edition is very indistinct.

Fol. E j, l. 13 ; for “feid” read “feid.”

Fol. E ij, back, l. 3 from bottom ; for “Abbots” read “Abbottes.”

These corrections made, the sole points of difference are, (1.) that the folios do not correspond ; (2.) that the words printed in the margin of the old edition are printed by Dr Whitaker in large red letters, to receive which he has made breaks in the continuous text ; and (3.) that Dr Whitaker employs red letters for the proper names. I should add, that all three editions have a short glossary at the end, made apparently by Reynold Wolfe, for which see p. xix.

IV. Mr Wright, in 1832, reprinted the “Crede” at the end of his excellent and handy edition of the “Vision,” the publisher being William Pickering ; of which a second and revised edition appeared in 1856, published by J. R. Smith, at a very moderate price. Mr Wright corrected most of the more obvious mistakes, so that his edition is very good and useful, and has been of very great service to me, and I here express the obligations to him which I thus lie under. It is therefore with no wish to detract from it, but only for the reader’s information, that I here state that I have observed several misprints in it which are mere printer’s errors, but where the edition of 1553 is quite correct. Thus at p. 456, l. 182, “Slaughte in her ende” should be “Slaughte is her ende ;” ten lines lower, “Put” should be “But ;” and fourteen lines lower still, “Minorities” should be “Minorites.” I am of course speaking of his revised edition, and I am induced to believe that the revision of the “Crede” may have been somewhat hurried, as I have observed no such traces of haste in the “Vision.”

§ 3. Besides the help thus afforded, we are much indebted to Mr Wright for the following sentence in his Introduction. He says, “I know only of two MSS. of the Creed of Piers Ploughman, one in the British Museum (MS. Reg. 18 B. xvii.), the other in the Library of Trinity College, Cambridge, both on paper, and written long after the date of the printed editions, from which they appear to have been copied." But for this notice, I might have overlooked the Trinity MS., as only the British Museum one is mentioned in Warton. After reading the above, I thought I could not do better than investigate these MSS. closely ; they might perhaps give some assistance. The result was surprising, certainly. First of all, it should be noted that Warton speaks of the British Museum MS. as "not much older than the printed copy," and this is certainly the more correct opinion ; the British Museum authorities whom Mr Furnivall consulted, declared it to belong certainly to the reign of Henry VIII. ; and that it was not copied from the printed edition became more and more obvious the more I read of it ; it soon appeared to be much more correct,¹ and I was myself quite satisfied that it was an independent and valuable text. At the same time, it occurred to me that a very obvious proof of its independence would appear in its containing anywhere additional lines ; and, after hoping to find some for a long time in vain, at last five new lines appeared, very near the end. These extra lines are of such importance that I have fully discussed them farther on.²

§ 4. But an examination of the Trinity MS. surprised me more still. The handwriting is late enough, certainly ; possibly after A.D. 1600. But a curious circumstance at once arrests attention, and that is, the continual use of the Saxon letters ȝ and þ, where the B. M. MS. and the printed editions have gh and th. It is clear that no man copying from a printed book would systematically make these alterations from one end of the poem to the other, and it is not very likely, even if he did, that he would never make a mistake over it. It is, in fact, obvious, that the Trinity MS. was copied from a much older MS. which is now lost, and this appears farther from noticing the nature of the few blunders that occur in it. Thus, in the first page, the copyist, not quite seeing the difference between a y and a þ, miswrites one for the other ; but he soon gets over this, and afterwards does it right. Again, seeing the word "wiffen" before him, he copied it "willen," a mistake easily made in copying from manuscript. Very many more proofs might be adduced, but it will probably be quite sufficient to add, further, that the five extra lines spoken of above appear in this MS. also.

§ 5. The results of the investigation, which seem to me beyond all controversy, are these :

- (1.) The British Museum MS. is older than the printed copy, and not copied from it.
- (2.) The Trinity MS. is later than the printed copy, but is not copied from it.
- (3.) Both MSS., and also the early printed text, are all copied from one and the same MS., a very good one, possibly even of the very last years of the fourteenth century, and which is now either lost or not forthcoming. The extreme similarity of these three texts cannot be otherwise accounted for.¹

Besides which, it is farther evident that the Trinity MS. is the best copy of the three,² and I have therefore used it for the text throughout, copying it literally and exactly, marking the expansions of contractions by italics. The only alterations made in it are, the use of capital letters to denote proper names where the MS. has often small letters, and some corrections which have been furnished by collation, which are all noticed in the foot-notes, and which, in every case where the correction is at all important, are pointed out by the use of square brackets. In the foot-notes, this MS. is denoted by the letter A.

The British Museum MS. is the second best copy, and is denoted

by the letter B in the foot-notes, the letter C (as already stated) meaning the edition of 1553. Attention is drawn to those readings of C which are most corrupt by marking them, in the foot-notes, with an asterisk. The number of these is about FORTY.

§ 6. By collation of these three, we are placed in almost as good a position as if we had the original old MS. before our eyes. I have little doubt but that the reader will be well-pleased to find that he is in possession of a sound and trustworthy text, much superior to that of 1553, because it is free from the modifications of spelling which the old printer often made, and because the misprints of that edition have been quite eliminated, and the true sense restored in several formerly doubtful passages. Indeed, the only points now open to doubt are very few; I somewhat mistrust the word euelles at l. 242; the word wlon at l. 736; and I suspect that, as is usual in alliterative poems, some lines were omitted even in the original; for the transition from ll. 69, 648 to the lines following them is rather too abrupt. I subjoin specimens of Texts B and C.

§ 7. I have printed the text in long lines, because all the copies are so written and printed, except only Mr Wright's edition. Mr Wright argues for the printing in short lines, in his Introduction, p. xxxii., because of the construction of the Anglo-Saxon verse, &c., and says that "a modern editor is wrong in printing the verses of Piers Plowman in long lines, as they stand in the manuscripts, unless he profess to give them as a fac-simile of the manuscripts themselves, or he plead the same excuse of convenience from the shape of his book." The italics are my own; and I will here only say that I do profess to give a fac-simile of the MS., and that I do plead also the excuse of convenience. He also observes that, "in either case, he must carefully preserve the dots of separation in the middle of the lines, which are more inconvenient than the length of the lines, because they interfere with the punctuation of the modern editor." This then I have done, though I have not found it inconvenient. On the contrary, I think it a great convenience. The dot denotes a pause in the rhythm, which very often indeed is coincident with a pause in the sense or with a comma, and thus indicates a certain indefiniteness in the pause, for which it is convenient to have a mark; and it is such a one as we are all accustomed to in the colon used in the Prayer-Book version of the Psalms. A semi-colon in the middle of a line is very rare; if it be required to denote one, we have only to print; · and it is done. I was induced to use the inverted full stop for this purpose, because it is very easy to print in any sized type, and because the use of a colon produced too heavy an effect, and did not look well. It is right to add that, in the edition of 1553, which is very badly punctuated,¹ the central rhythmical pause is denoted by a comma in about five lines out of six. In MS. B it is neglected; but in MS. A it is, for the most part, carefully preserved, and denoted by a kind of colon. Here, then, the superiority of this MS. is once more indicated.

§ 8. SOME ACCOUNT OF THE POEM.

The reader may consult with advantage Warton's History of English Poetry (vol. 2, p. 123, ed. 1824), upon this subject. In a copy of the "Crede" in Warton's possession, was a short abstract of the poem in the handwriting of Alexander Pope, to whom the book once belonged. As anything written by Pope has an interest of its own, I here quote it.

“An ignorant plain man having learned his Paternoster and Ave-mary, wants to learn his creed. He asks several religious men of the several orders to teach it him. First of a friar Minor, who bids him beware of the Carmelites, and assures him that they can teach him nothing, describing their faults, &c. But that the friars Minors shall save him, whether he learns his creed or not. He goes next to the friars Preachers, whose magnificent monastery he describes : there he meets a fat friar, who declaims against the Augustines. He is shocked at his pride, and goes to the Augustines. They rail at the Minorites. He goes to the Carmes [Carmelites] ; they abuse the Dominicans, but promise him salvation, without the creed, for money. He leaves them with indignation, and finds an honest poor PLOWMAN in the field, and tells him how he was disappointed by the four orders. The ploughman answers with a long invective against them.”

To this Warton subjoins an account of the mendicant orders, occupying about eight pages, which should be consulted.

§ 9. Good accounts of the rise and spread of the mendicant orders are abundant. The reader may, for a general view of them, consult with advantage Massingberd's History of the English Reformation, chap. vii. ; Southey's Book of the Church, chap. xi. ; the very interesting preface to the “Monumenta Franciscana,” by the editor, Professor Brewer ; the excellent life of S. Francis of Assisi, in Sir James Stephen's “Lectures on Ecclesiastical Biography ;” Mrs Jameson's “Legends of the Monastic Orders ;” and almost any Church History. I shall here only touch on such points as have special reference to the poem.

§ 10. The degeneracy of the monks began to draw attention at an early period ; and, in particular, St Hildegardis, abbess of St Rupert's mount, near Bingen,¹ addressed to them words of solemn warning, in the shape of prophecies which announced that still greater corruptions were to come, and would be punished by shameful disgrace and ruin. Very nearly at the same time, viz. during the reign of Henry II., appeared the masterly Latin satires of Walter Map, who was particularly severe upon the Cistercian Benedictines, of whom he saw rather too much.¹ Two of his poems, "The Apocalypse of Bishop Goliath," and "The Confession of Goliath," contain most keen and brilliant satire. They are distinguished by a peculiar subtlety, which has not always been understood. Thus, when Map introduces a drunken priest revealing the depth of his degradation by uttering the oft-quoted stanza,

"Meum est propositum in taberna mori :

Vinum sit appositum morientis ori,

Ut dicant cum venerint angelorum chori,

'Deus sit propitius huic potatori'—

this has seemed to many a mere jovial toper's song, and nothing more. But such was not the view taken, we may fairly conclude, by the author of the "Crede." He can perceive only two possible causes of the rise of the mendicant orders ; either the simple supposition that Satan founded them, or else that they originated, in no slight degree, from the popularity of the "Goliath" poems.² He suggests that the subtlety of Map's satire was such that the monastic orders were brought into utter disrepute, and therefore the mendicant orders arose to supersede them. That the influence of the "Goliath" poems was so great as this may well be doubted, especially when we remember that the new orders commenced on the continent, not in England. At the same time, it is equally certain that our author is not far wrong ; it is quite clear that the rise of the mendicants was due to an attempt made (and which was at the first outset a successful one) to infuse a new spirit of piety and humility into the church, and to regenerate it by efforts of great self-denial and devotion. The character of St Francis seems to me to be in many respects beyond all praise ; an enthusiast he was certainly, but noble, self-sacrificing, and pure in heart and aim in the highest degree. To give but one instance : we read that he had the greatest natural repugnance to the sight of a leper, yet he forced himself to eat out of the same dish with one whom no one could see without loathing, and afterwards devoted himself especially to an attendance upon the leper hospitals, enjoining his followers to do the same. Such an act was a noble example of mercy and humanity ; and, had his followers really followed his rules, they might have done well for a long time.¹ But St Francis was clear-sighted enough to see how liable all human institutions are to perversion and decay, and this reflection kept him in continual sadness. "Cheerless and unalluring is the image of Francis of Assisi : his figure gaunt and wasted, his countenance furrowed with care, his soul hurried from one excitement to another, incapable of study, incapable of repose, forming attachments but to learn their fragility, conquering difficulties but to prove the vanity of conquest, living but to consolidate his order of Minor Brethren, and yet haunted by continual forebodings of their rapid degeneracy."² And this too surely came to pass ; and however bad may have been the state of the monks who forgot their vows of renunciation of the world, it was not long before the state of the friars became far worse. Their greed, their selfishness, their love of magnificent buildings and, very often, of delicate clothing which they concealed under their rough cloaks, their insolence, their pride, their self-righteousness, made them fair objects of satire, which was levelled against them most unsparingly by many, and especially by Wycliffe and his followers. This is nowhere shewn more clearly than in the story quoted by Southey,³ shewing how the friars waited on Wycliffe once at Oxford when he was supposed to be sick unto death, when he "raised himself on his pillow, and looking at them sternly, replied, I shall not die, but live still further to declare the evil deeds of the friars !" And thoroughly did he fulfil his own prediction.⁴ They retaliated on him and his followers, as might be expected ; and were particularly active in trying to secure the condemnation of Walter Brute,⁵ when he was examined by the Bishop of Hereford, on a charge of heresy.

² See l. 479, and the note to it.

§ 11. The mention of the last circumstance helps us to fix the date of the poem ; it is spoken of in the past tense,

and the writer seems to hint that they did not very greatly succeed, and were obliged to content themselves with preaching against him, and calling him a heretic. Walter Brute was examined more than once, and he was on his trial from time to time, from A.D. 1391 to 1393. On Monday, October 6, of the latter year, he submitted himself to the bishop of Hereford, contriving rather to allow that his opinions might be overruled by the church than offering to recant them explicitly, so that he was less severely treated than his opponents had hoped and expected. At the same time, this circumstance, though past, was no doubt still very fresh in the minds of all, for the present tense is used in ll. 659, 660 ; and we also gather that, though the friars wished to see heretics burnt, there had been no instance as yet of any such event. Hence the poem was certainly written after the latter part of 1393, and before 1401. But we may come much closer than this to the date ; for the allusion to flattering kings in ll. 364, 365 no doubt refers to Richard II., who was still alive. Indeed, had the poem been written in the year of his death, or just after it, we might fairly expect to find some allusion to it, so that our lower date now becomes February, 1400. Hence internal evidence alone suggests some year in the series 1394—1399 as the year of composition.

§ 12. But this inquiry is closely connected with another, viz., what is known of the author ? We know certainly that he was an avowed Wycliffite, that he was not the author of the “ Vision of Piers Plowman ” (which was partly written in A.D. 1362),¹ but that he imitated the metre of that poem, and, to some extent, the satirical tone of it. Besides this, he clearly took the plan of his poem from the “ Vision ;” the way in which he wanders about seeking some one to teach him his Creed is copied from the description of the efforts of William the dreamer to find where the abode is of Do-well, Do-bet, and Do-best. In fact, it is easy to point to the particular passage in the "Vision" which he was thinking of. The first fifteen lines of the Prologue to the Vita de Do-well give the key-note to the "Crede," and I therefore quote them here by way of illustration.

þus I-robed in russet · romed I aboute

PIERS PLOWMAN, (ed. Skeat, 1867); Text A. ix. 1—15.

We should observe, too, that the two authors take rather different views of "Piers the Ploughman." Langland considers him as the type of a class of industrious and lowly-minded men, who guided their life by the Gospel, and by their influence induced others to admire and practise a pure and simple form of Christianity based upon a true-felt love for their fellows. Langland's Ploughman gives good advice even to the knight and to gentle ladies; and, towards the end of the poem, he introduces the Piers Ploughman, par excellence, the good Samaritan above all others, Jesus Christ the righteous. But the Ploughman in the Crede is an individual, a ploughman and no more, described as in an abject state of poverty, yet so gifted with homely common sense as fully to see through all the tricks of the friars, and knowing very little more than is necessary for his soul's health, little more than the Creed and the Gospels. It is perhaps right to remind the reader that there is a difference even in the very titles of the poems. The one is "Piers Ploughman's Crede," i. e. the creed which the ploughman taught; the other is "Visio Willelmi de Petro Ploughman," the "Vision of Piers Ploughman which William saw," and which may be spoken of as the "Vision," or as "Piers Ploughman," but never as "Piers Ploughman's Vision," except by such as have no regard for accuracy, and who would not stick at using the term "Christian's Vision" as an equivalent one to Bunyan's vision of one Christian.

§ 13. Any further information about the author of the "Crede" can only be obtained by the discovery of other poems which he may have written. Now there are some poems printed in "Monumenta Franciscana," pp. 591—608, and again printed in Wright's "Political Poems," vol. i. pp. 253—270, which are worth some attention. The first is in Latin, the second two (of which Mr Brewer has made three) in English; they are all by the same author, and clearly written during the reign of Richard II.¹ by one who says that he had been a novice in the order of St Francis, but had left it to become a Wychiffite; also, that he was not an apostata, as he had not stayed in the convent his full year, but only about ten months and twenty days. They are outspoken attacks upon the friars, and upon the Minorites in particular, and at first sight seem to have a good deal in common with the "Crede." A careful scrutiny, however, of their language makes the identity of authorship seem doubtful, and, though it seemed to me at first probable, I now give it up; though, at the same time, these poems well deserve to be compared with the "Crede," and I have therefore quoted from them occasionally in the Notes. But there is another poem which stands a close scrutiny better, and deserves yet more attention, and this is no other than the well-known "Plowman's Tale," which has even been attributed to Chaucer, though it most certainly is not his. It may be found among the Canterbury Tales in most old editions subsequent to 1542; and also under the title of the "Complaint of the Ploughman," in Wright's "Political Poems," vol. i. pp. 304—316. Now the writer of this piece distinctly claims to have written the “Crede;” for he says,

“Of freres I have told before
In a making of a Crede;”

i. e. in a poem named a “Creed.” Mr Wright, if I interpret him correctly, seems to think this means no more than that the two poems were written by two men of the same way of thinking. But I am inclined to take it literally, simply in the plain sense which the words naturally bear. After reading this “Complaint of the Ploughman” again and again, I am more and more convinced that its writer states the simple truth. The dialect of the poems is the same; there is the same use of the past participle beginning with I- or Y-; the vocabulary is very similar; identities of phrase occur in many places; whilst the object of both is precisely the same, viz. to attack the friars, and to defend Wycliffe. The proof would be somewhat tedious from the very great number of similarities which might be adduced; but some of the most striking will be found in the notes. It is quite a noticeable feature in the “Crede” how frequently the words glose, glosinge, glosed occur; and there is precisely the same repetition of them in the “Complaint.” In both poems occur such remarkable words as tote (to look), angerliche, baselards, falsched, defended (forbade), bigge (to build), crochettes or crokettes, eggeth, faitours, hernes, fain (to feign), sewe (to follow), queint, queintise (in the peculiar sense of crafty, craft), lorell, wisse, se (seat), curates, wilne, sain (to say), seker or siker, trusse (to pack), hongen (to hang), and many others. The full force of the argument can only be perceived by a reader who compares the poems for himself, and consists even more in the fact that the force of the above words in both poems is generally the same, than in the mere occurrence of the words themselves; yet even this is of great weight, considering how short the poems are, and how rare are some of the words. Then again, we find, in both, like peculiar expressions such as, curteis Christ, cuttel clothes, &c. But the similarities which a reader would probably attach most weight to are such as these which I here tabulate.

Several more points of resemblance might be cited, but surely these are sufficient to confirm a statement made by the author himself, and against which there cannot be adduced any argument whatever. It may be looked upon, I think, as a proved fact; and I would ask the reader who has any lingering doubts fairly to compare the poems, and he will see how very much—to save space—I have understated and curtailed the proofs of it.

§ 14. There is no exact evidence for the date of the "Complaint," but Mr Wright puts it down at about 1393 or 1394, giving to the "Crede" the date 1392, and to the proceedings against Walter Brute that of 1391. But these proceedings lasted some time, and were not over till 1393, being merely commenced in 1391; and on this account

I assign about 1394 as the date of the "Crede," and about 1395 as that of the "Complaint." These dates satisfy every condition, and I do not think will ever need much alteration.

§ 15. The "Crede" has always been a favourite poem. Dr Whitaker quotes the following. "A piece" (says Mr Rawlinson, speaking of the CREDE) "rare and good, in which the remains of Monastic Antiquity are graphically describ'd. It charms me on that account when e'er I read it;" Hearne. MS. Collections, Vol. lxxxii. page 75. It has several passages of great interest, as for instance, the celebrated description (one of the best we have) of a Dominican convent. The pillars were painted and polished, and carved with curious knots. The windows were well wrought and lofty. The buildings were well walled-in all round, with postern-doors for easy egress. There were gardens and "erberes" (herbaria) with well-clipped borders, a cross curiously carved, and "tabernacles" used for reconnoitring from. Then there was the minster with its arches, and crockets, and knots of gold, its painted windows glorious with coats-of-arms and merchants' marks, its tombs with knights in alabaster, and lovely ladies by their side in gay garments; its cloisters pillared and painted, covered with lead and paved with painted tiles, with conduits of tin and lavers of "latun;" and its chapter-house fairly carved, and with a splendid ceiling. Then there was a refectory like a king's hall, regal kitchens, a dormitory with strong doors, halls, houses, chambers, infirmary, &c.; and then yet more houses with gay garrets, and every window-hole glazed. How excellent, again, are the portraits of the fat friar with his double-chin shaking about, as big as a goose's egg, and the poor ploughman with his hood full of holes and his mittens made of patches, followed by his poor wife going "bare-foot on the bare ice, that the blood followed!" Whilst the cry of the ploughman's children sums up the early history of the poor of England in the words—

"And alle þey songen o songe · þat scrwe was to heren; þey crieden alle o ery · a carefull note."

The real value of the poem lies, in fact, in these and other vivid and exact descriptions, which are alike useful to the antiquary and interesting to the general reader, as they give a clear insight into the condition of the poor, the animosity which existed between the friars and the secular clergy, and, most striking point of all, the utter contempt in which the orders held each other, and the audacity with which each tried to surpass the rest both in pitiless extortion and in proud display. To sum up all briefly, the poem is one which deserves not only to be read, but to be studied; it is one of those which is much more interesting on a second perusal than on a first, and continually improves upon acquaintance. It is well illustrated by, and well illustrates, Chancer, and, in particular, the "Sompnours Tale." It is of much value to lexicographers, who have made considerable use of it; and it is on this account (as well as with a view to make this edition suitable for use in schools), that I have tried to make the Glossarial Index tolerably full and complete.¹

§ 16. NOTE ON THE FIVE EXTRA LINES NOW FIRST PRINTED. It has been already mentioned that the MSS. are shewn to be independent of the printed edition by the appearance in them of five new lines. It so happens that these lines are certainly genuine, and of great importance. They are ll. 822, 823, and 828, 829, and 830. It is quite easy to see why Reynold Wolfe did not print them; they savoured far too much of the doctrine of transubstantiation to be likely to be acceptable to Protestant readers in the reign of Edward VI.; and he therefore purposely suppressed them. But he did it very clumsily, for he quite overlooked the fact that the omission of them took away the clue to the context and quite robbed it of all meaning, so that the whole of ll. 824—827 and 831—840 seem to be inserted, much to the reader's bewilderment, literally à-propos of nothing.² But now that these lines are restored, the drift of this whole passage is clear enough, and we perceive that the author is attacking the friars on yet one more point, viz. for the subtlety of their arguments about the sacrament of the mass, and for their attempts to explain a mystery which had much better, in his opinion, be left unexplained. His belief is, he says, that "God's body and blood are really in the sacrament; and though proud friars dispute about God's deity like dotards, the more the matter is stirred, the more confused they become. Christ said it is so; then what need of more words? No need to study and bestir our wits. These masters of divinity, many of them, do not follow the faith, as many of the common people do. How may any man's unassisted wit understand the mysteries of Christ that surpass all natural phenomena? A man must be of as meek a heart as Christ himself to receive the Holy Ghost by the purity of his life; and if a man is thus meek, he needs not to study the matter, nor to be called a Master (which Christ forbade), nor to put a cap on his bald pate; all he need do is to preach and live a pure life, and to use no pride." Such is the true sense of the whole passage, and it is quite consistent and intelligible. It appears further that, with some notion of hiding the omission, five lines, ll. 817—821, were inserted in the same edition; these I believe to be spurious, and of no older date than 1553. The imitation of style and spelling is very ingenious, but the alliteration in them is not so good. For further information, see note to l. 817, &c.

§ 17. GLOSSARY, &c. TO THE FIRST PRINTED EDITION. The edition of 1553 has some lines "to the reader" prefixed to it, and a Glossary at the end.¹ These are of little importance, but are printed here for completeness' sake. On the back of the title-page we find, in italics—

"To the Reader.

*To read strange newes, desires manye,

For here is but antiquitie
Expressed only, as tholde booke gaue.

On the last leaf we find, in black letter—"For to occupie this leaffe which els shuld haue ben vacant, I haue made an interpretation of certayne hard wordes vsed in this booke for the better vnderstandyng of it.

ADDITIONAL NOTE TO L. 428.

As regards the description of the poor ploughman, Mr Furnivall has kindly sent me the following quotation, which helps to shew that the meaning of mete is middling, poor, mean, as already suggested.

“ ‘ Ile cloth my-selfe in strange array, in a beggars habbitt I will goe, that when I come before the Erle of March,
 my clothing strange he shall not knowe.’

John, hee gott on a clouted cloake, soe meete & low then by his knee,
 with 4 garters vpon one Legg,
 2 aboue, & towe below, trulyc.”

William Stewart and John ; Bp. Percy's Folio MS., p. 432 ; printed in vol. iii. of the Ballads & Romances.

I would add, with regard to the word hokschyne, that hacke in German and hak in Dutch, are both used to denote the heel.

With regard to ll. 627-629, a reply to my query in “Notes and Queries” has appeared, written by Mr G. A. Sala. See N. & Q.; 3rd S. xii. 211.

NOTES.

LINE 1. Cros, the cross. Alluding probably to the mark of a cross which was sometimes prefixed to the beginning of a piece of writing, especially of an alphabet in a primer. See Notes and Queries, 3rd S. xi. 352. The alliteration in this line is defective, and it scans badly.

6. patred. The readings are, patres, AC; partes B; but neither of these make sense, whilst the following extract shews that patred is the right word.

“Ever he patred on theyr names faste,
That he had them in ordre at the laste.”

How the Plowman lerned his Paternoster :

Hazlitt's Early Pop. Poetry, vol. i. p. 215.

17. And if = an if, i. e. if. The spelling and for an is not uncommon; it still stands, e. g., in our Bibles, Mat. xxiv. 48, and and = if in Lancelot of the Laik, l. 1024.

coupe, teach; sub. the Creed.

20. wilneþ, desireth: the writer distinguishes between wille and wilneþ; cf. l. 17.

25. leucden, believed; leucn (believe) would suit the context better.

27. for-þan, A.S. for-þan, for-þam, from for and þam (dat. case of the demonstrative pronoun se, seð, þæt); for that, with a view to that. The sense is, “But, by questioning them with a view to finding out what they know, many are there found to fail.”

28. This interview with the Minorite was doubtless suggested by Passus IX of Piers Plowman (Text A). There, William asks two Minorites if they know where Do-wel is, whereupon—“Mari, (quod þe Menour) · Among vs he dweleþ,” &c. See the Preface.

29. fourre ordres. See Massingberd; Hist. of Reformation, chap. vii., on “The Mendicant Orders; their rise and history.” A few of the most useful facts about the four orders of friars are here collected for convenience, arranged in the order in which they are more fully spoken of further on. They were,

(1.) The Minorites, Franciscans, or Gray Friars, called in France Cordeliers. Called Franciscans, from their founder, St Francis of Assisi;

Minorites (in Italian, Frati Minori, in French, Frères Mineurs), as being, as he said, the humblest of the religious foundations; Gray Friars, from the colour of their habit; and Cordeliers, from the hempen cord with which they were girded. For further details, see Monumenta Franciscana, which tells us that they were fond of physical studies, made much use of Aristotle, preached pithy sermons, exalted the Virgin, encouraged marriages, and were the most popular of the orders, but at last degenerated into a compound of the pedlar or huckster with the mountebank or quack doctor. See Mrs Jameson's Legends of the Monastic orders, and the Life of St Francis in Sir J. Stephen's Ecclesiastical Biography. They arrived in England in A.D. 1224. Friar Bacon was a Franciscan.

(2.) The Dominicans, Black Friars, Friars Preachers, or Jacobins. Founded by St Dominick, of Castile; order confirmed by Pope Honorius in A.D. 1216; arrived in England about 1221. Habit, a white woollen gown, with white girdle; over this, a white scapular; over these, a black cloak with a hood, whence their name. They were noted for their fondness for preaching, their great knowledge of scholastic theology, their excessive pride, and the splendour of their buildings. The Black Monks were the Benedictines.

(3.) The Augustine or Austin Friars, so named from St Augustine of Hippo. They clothed in black, with a leathern girdle. They were first congregated into one body by Pope Alexander IV., under one Lanfranc, in 1256. They are distinct from the Augustine Canons.

(4.) The Carmelites, or White Friars, whose dress was white, over a dark-brown tunic. They pretended that their order was of the highest antiquity and derived from Helias, i. e. the prophet Elijah; that a succession of anchorites had lived in Mount Carmel from his time till the thirteenth century; and that the Virgin was the special protectress of their order. Hence they were sometimes called "Maries men," as at l. 48, with which cf. l. 384.

As the priority of the foundation of the orders is so often discussed in the poem, I add that the dates of their first institution are, Augustines, 1150; Carmelites, 1160; Dominicans, 1206; Franciscans, 1209.

31. MS. A. is here obviously corrupt.

32. The reading wittede is a mistake made from confusion with wyten. Wende (I weened) is the true past tense of wenen; as in l. 452.

41. that thou maddē, that thou art mad. Mr Wright printed "that thou [art] madde;" but cf. l. 280, and Chau. Mil. Ta., l. 373.

43. jugulors. See Tyrwhitt's Chaucer; note to Cant. Tales, v. 11453. The jongleurs or jogelors (joculatores) were originally minstrels who could perform feats of sleight of hand, &c., but they soon became mere mountebanks, and the name became, as here, a term of contempt. We read of "jogulors, dremers, and rafars," (reavers, spoilers); see Apology attributed to Wycliffe; (Camden Soc.) p. 96.

43. iapers, of kynde, jesters, by nature. Cf.

"Bote Iapers and Iangelers · Indas Children."

Piers Plowman, A. prol. 35 (ed. Skeat, 1867).

44. Lorels and losels (used further on) are much the same word. We find in the Glosse of Spenser's Shepheard's Calendar (August) the following: "Lorrell, a losell;" which shews that the latter form was the one longest used.

46. gestes, legends, tales; see Tyrwhitt's Chaucer; note to v. 13775.

48. Compare,

"Horum quidam prædicant quod sunt ex Maria;

Alii tamen asserunt quod sunt ex Helia."—Pol. Poems, i. 262.

"The Carmelites, sometimes called the brethren of the blessed Virgin, were fond of boasting their familiar intercourse with the Virgin Mary. Among other things, they pretended that the Virgin assumed the Carmelite habit and profession; and that she appeared to Simon Sturckius, general of their order, in the thirteenth century, and gave him a solemn promise, that the souls of those Christians who died with the Carmelite scapulary upon their shoulders, should infallibly escape damnation."—Warton, Hist. Eng. Poet. ii. 132; ed. 1824.

Hone (Ancient Mysteries, p. 281) reminds us that some of the most absurd tales told by the Carmelites have been not very long ago revived in "A Short Treatise of the Antiquity, Privileges, &c., of the Confraternity of our Blessed Lady of Mount Carmel." (London, 1796, 18mo.)

54. to fynde; compare the phrase, to find one in meat and drink.

65. freres of the Pye. These would appear to be not very different from the Carmelites; they were called Pied Friars from their dress being a mixture of black and white, like a magpie.

"With an O and an I, fuerunt Pyed Freres, Quomodo mutati sunt, rogo dicat Pers."

Pol. Poems, i. 262.

67. glut = A.S. gluto, a glutton.

70. "People may bequest their money, &c." A line seems lost between 69 and 70.

72. "Robartes men, or Roberdsmen, were a set of lawless vagabonds, notorious for their outrages when Pierce Plowman was written. The statute of Edward the Third (an. reg. 5, c. xiv) specifies 'divers manslaughterers, felonies, and robberies, done by people that be called Robardesmen, Wastours, and drawlatches.' And the statute of Richard the Second (an. reg. 7, c. v.) ordains, that the statute of King Edward concerning Roberdsmen and Drawlacches shall be rigorously observed. Sir Edward Coke (Instit. iii. 197) supposes them to have been originally the followers of Robert Hood in the reign of Richard the First. See Blackstone's Comm. B. iv. ch. 17."—Warton, Hist. E. P. ii. 133; ed. 1824.

77. lulling—miracles. For some account of the Miracle Plays, see Massingberd; Hist. Reformation, p. 124; and Hone's Ancient Mysteries. I have little doubt that the particular one here alluded to is "Mystery VIII.," at p. 67 of Hone, about the Miraculous Birth of Christ and the Midwives, the story of which was derived from the Protevangelion, cap. xiv., given in Hone's "Apocryphal Gospels." Compare "To pleyes of miracles, and mariages."

Chaucer, Wyf of Bathes Prologe; l. 558.

79. that the laee, &c. Henry, in his Hist. of Britain, i. 459, says—"Amongst the ancient Britons, when a birth was attended with any difficulty, they put certain girdles made for that purpose about the women in labour, which they imagined gave them immediate and effectual relief. Such girdles were kept with care, till very lately, in many families in the Highlands of Scotland."—Brand, Pop. Antiq. ii. 67. This custom seems to have been derived (says Brand) from the Druids. See also a ballad in "The Ballad Book," p. 320. It is easy to see how the friars gladly re-adapted this superstition.

"For in his male he had a pilwebeer,
Which that, he saide, was oure lady reyl."

Chaucer, Prol. l. 695.

84. gold by the eighen, gold by the eyes. This probably refers to the ornaments of golden net-work worn at this time at the side of the face, thickest just beside the eyes, and which were, in reality, part of the caul. For specimens of them, see Fairholt's Costume in England, pp. 182, 183. So too, gretchedede seems to refer to the size of the head-dress. The Wyf of Bath's weighed nearly ten pounds.

89. "Forsoth manye walken, whom I haue seide oft to you, forsoth now and I wepinge seie, the enemyes of Cristis cross, whos ende deeth, or perisching, whos god is the wombe, and glorie in confusioun of hem."—Wycliff's Bible, Philip. iii. 18, 19.

91. slauthe, sloth. I retain this reading (that of both the MSS.), though I have been told that it certainly ought to be slaughte = slaughter, because it refers to "whos ende is deeth," quoted in the note above. But the author is not very accurate in quotation, and has already introduced the expression Such slomerers in slepe, to which slauthe answers well enough. Sloth and Gluttony are constantly mentioned together by our old writers, as they were the two of the seven deadly sins which seemed most akin; so here, "their sloth is their end, and their gluttony is their God."

97. and fele mo othere, and (so are) many others besides.

100. The error "willen" in MS. A arose from misreading "wiffen," written with two long esses; see foot-notes to ll. 233, 531, and 577.

103. Menures, Minorites. There was some truth in the Minorites' assertion. They seem to have kept their vows of poverty much more strictly than did the other orders. At first, they settled in the poorer suburbs of crowded towns, among the dregs of the population, and they nursed the patients in the leper hospitals. See the most interesting preface to "Monumenta Franciscana," by J. S. Brewer.

107. Compare the account of friars in Pol. Poems, i. 330;—

"At the wrastling, and at the wake,
And chiefe chauntours at the nale (ale);

Market-beaters, and medling make,
Hoppen and houten with heve and hale," &c.

116. to coueren with our bones, to cover our bones with. There are several other instances of this curious position of the word with in the poem. See l. 401.

118. burw, a borough; i. e. a large convent. The buildings of the Minorites were, at first, of the meanest and most inexpensive kind; but they gradually began to imitate the other orders.

119. Chapaile, chapel. Perhaps the other reading chapitle, a chapter-house, Lat. capitulum, is better.

121. paynt, painted; pulched, polished.

124. cnely, kneel. The infinitive in y is common enough.

128. The glazing of windows for convents by rich benefactors seems to have been a favourite way of buying pardons; see Monumenta Franciscana, p. 515; "De Vitracione Fenestrarum." Cf. also Piers Plowman, A. iii. 48—62.

Warton's note on this line is—"Your figure kneeling to Christ shall be painted in the great west window. This was the way of representing benefactors in painted glass."—Hist. Eng. Poet. ii. 135; ed. 1824.

141. So in Piers Plowman (ed. Wright, p. 189).

"Why menestow thi mood for a mote
In thi brotheres eighe,
Sithen a been in thyn owene Abyndeth thiselve;"

where menestow should be meucstow = movest thou.

153. the first, i. e. the Dominicans, as being the wealthiest, proudest, and most learned. In the next line they are called the Preachers.

157. "It was a singular change when the friars began to dwell in palaces and stately houses. . . . Richard Leatherhead, a grey friar from London, having been made bishop of Ossory, in A.D. 1318, pulled down three churches to get materials for his palace. But the conventual buildings, especially of the Black Friars, are described by the author of Pierce Plowman's Creed, a poet of Wycliffe's time, as rivalling the old monasteries in magnificence."—Massingberd, Hist. Eng. Reform. p. 119. The following remark on this subject is striking. "Swilk maner of men bigging (building) thus biggings semen to turn bred into stoness; that is to sey, the bred of the pore, that is, almis beggid, into hepis of stonis, that is, into stonen howsis costly and superflew, and therfor they semen werrar (worse) than the fend, that askid stonis into bred."—Apology attributed to Wycliffe, p. 49 (Camden Soc.). Compare also,

"Illi domos conficiunt miræ largitatis,
Politis lapidibus, quibusdam quadratis;
Totum tectum tegitur lignis levigatis;
Sed transgressum regulæ probant ista satis.
With an O and an I, facta vestra tabent,
Christus cum sic dixerat, 'foveas vulpes habent.'"

Pol. Poems, p. 255, vol. i.

158. Say I, Saw I. We generally find se3 or seiz. See ll. 208, 421:

159. Y3mede, I gazed with attention; 3erne, eagerly, earnestly.

161. knottes; see Glossary.

165. posternes in pryuytè. "These private posterns are frequently alluded to in the reports of the Commissioners for the Dissolution of the Monasteries in the reign of Henry VIII. One of them, speaking of the abbey of Langden, says, 'Wheras immediately descendyng fro my horse, I sent Bartlett your servant, with all my servantes to circumcept the abbay and surely to kepe all bake dorres and startyng hoilles, and I myself went alone to the abbottes logeyng joynyn upon the feldes and wode, eryn lyke a cony clapper full of startyng hoilles.'—(MS. Cotton. Cleop. E. iv. fol. 127.) Another commissioner (MS. Cotton. Cleop. E. iv. fol. 35), in a letter concerning the monks of the Charter-house in London, says, "These charter-howse monkes wolde be called solytary, but to the cloyster dore ther be above xxiiij. keys in the handes of xxiiij. persons, and hit is lyke my letters, unprofytable tayles and tydinges and sumtyme perverse concell comynthe and goythe by reason therof. Allso to the buttrey dore ther be xij. sundrye keyes in xij. [mens] hands, wherein symythe to be small husbandrye." Quoted from Mr Wright's notes to the "Crede."

166. euesed, bordered. This verb is formed from the A.S. efese, the modern English caves, which (it ought to be remembered) is, strictly, a noun in the singular number.

167. entayled, carved, cut. This word occurs in Spenser, Faerie Queene, Bk. ii. c. 3, st. 27, and c. 6, st. 29.

168. toten, to spy; a tote-hyll is a hill to spy from, now shortened to Tothill.

169. "The price of a carucate of land, would not raise such another building." Warton's note.

172. awaytede a woon, beheld a dwelling; ybuld, built.

174. erochetes, crockets (see Glossary). They were so named from their resembling bunches or locks of hair, and we find the word used in the latter sense in the Complaint of the Ploughman.

"They kembe her crokettes with christall."

Pol. Poems, vol. i. p. 312.

175. ywritten full thicke, inscribed with many texts or names.

176. schapen scheldes, "coats of arms of benefactors painted in the glass." Warton's note; which see, for examples of them.

177. merkes of marchauntes, "their symbols, cyphers, or badges, drawn or painted in the windows. . . Mixed with the arms of their founders and benefactors stand also the marks of tradesmen and merchants, who had no arms, but used their marks in a shield like Arms. Instances of this sort are very common."—Warton's note, where he also says they may be found in Great St Mary's, Cambridge, in Bristol cathedral, and in churches at Lyun.

180. rageman. Alluding to the Ragman Rolls, originally "a collection of those deeds by which the nobility and gentry of Scotland were tyrannically constrained to subscribe allegiance to Edward I. of England, in 1296, and which were more particularly recorded in four large rolls of parchment, consisting of 35 pieces, bound together, and kept in the tower of London."—Jamieson's Scottish Dictionary. See also Nares's Glossary, where we find—"Ragman, made from rage-man, stands in Piers Plowman [ed. Wright, v. ii. p. 335] for the devil; probably, therefore, this tyrannical roll was originally stigmatised as the Devil's roll." The modern rigmarole is a curious corruption of this term.

181. tyld opon lofte, set up on high. It means that the tombs were raised some three or four feet above the ground.

182. housed in hirnes, enclosed in corners or niches. The old printed text has hornes, for which Warton suggested hurnes, and he guessed rightly; but it is odd that he did not observe that MS. B has hernis, as he collated the passage with that MS.; besides which, the old glossary has hyrnes, shewing that hornes is a mere misprint.

183. In the church of the Grey Friars, near Newgate, were buried, in all, 663 persons of quality. Stowe says "there were nine tombs of alabaster and marble, invironed with strikes of iron, in the choir." See preface to the "Chronicle of the Grey Friars of London;" (Camden Soc., 1852) p. xxi.

184, 185. MS. A omits these lines, obviously owing to the repetition of clud for the nones.

185. "In their cognisances, or surcoats of arms."—Warton.

188. gold-beten, adorned with beaten gold.

194. peynt til, painted tiles. MS. B has paine, by obvious error for painte; the scribe has apparently altered it to pavine, thinking it meant paving. The old printed text has poynnt til, on which Warton's note is, "Point en point is a French phrase for in order, exactly. This explains the latter part of the line. Or poynntil may mean tiles in squares or dies, in chequer-work. See Skinner in POINT, and Du Fresne in PUNCTURA. And then, ich point after other will be one square after another. So late as the reign of Henry the Eighth, so magnificent a structure as the refectory of Christ-church at Oxford was, at its first building, paved with green and yellow tiles. The whole number was 2600, and each hundred cost 3s. 6d." But Warton was slightly misled by the old text; poynnte merely means bit, piece, as in l. 198. It is true that poynntil occurs in many dictionaries, glossaries, &c., but in every case I find that the only quotation given for it is the present line, and I hold it to be a mere misprint. Peynt = painted is common enough (see l. 192), but I doubt the existence of poynnt in the sense of pointed or squared. Indeed, Mr Ellis, rejecting Warton's explanation, proposed to explain poynntil by pantiles, which, however, cannot be used for paving, not being flat.

"And yit, God wot, unnethe the foundement
Parformed is, ne of oure pavymet
Is nought a tyle yit withinne our wones."

Chaucer, Somynours Tale, l. 403.

197. I trow the produce of the land in a great shire would not furnish that place (hardly) one bit towards the other end ; a stronger phrase than "from one end to the other," as Warton explains it. Oo properly = one.

199. Chapitre-hous. "The chapter-house was magnificently constructed in the style of church-architecture, finely vaulted, and richly carved."—Warton.

201. With "a seemly ceiling, or roof, very lofty."—Warton.

202. y-peynted, painted. Before tapestry became fashionable, the walls of rooms were painted. For proofs, see Warton's long note.

203. fraytour, refectory.

209. chymneyes, fireplaces. Langlande complains bitterly that the rich often despise dining in the hall, and eat by themselves "in a privy parlour, or in a chamber with a chimney." Piers Plowman : ed. Wright, p. 179, vol. i.

211. dortour, dormitory.

212. fermery, infirmary ; fele mo, many more. Chaucer uses fermerere for the person who had charge of the infirmary.—Sompnoures Tale, l. 151 ; dortour occurs in the same passage, just 4 lines above.

216. Compare

"Yif us a busschel whet, or malt, or reye,
A Goddes kichil, or a trip of chese,
Or elles what yow list, we may not chese," &c.

Sompnoures Tale, l. 38.

217. onethe, with difficulty.

219. ytoted, investigated, espied.

220. Friars are also accused of fatness in the following :—

"I have lyued now fourty ȝers
And fatter men about the neres ȝit sawe I neuer then are thes frers
In contreys ther thai rayke.

Meteles, so meagre are thai made, and penaunce so puttes ham down
That ichone is an hors-lade, whan he shal trusse of toun !"¹

Pol. Poems, i. 264.

222. "With a face as fat as a full bladder that is blown quite full of breath ; and it hung like a bag on both his cheeks, and his chin lolled (or flapped) about with a jowl (or double-chin) that was as great as a goose's egg, grown all of fat ; so that all his flesh wagged about like a quick mire (quagmire)."

228. The line "with double worsted well ydight" occurs in the Complaint of the Ploughman ; Pol. Poems, i. 334.

229. The kirtle was the under-garment, which was worn white by the Black Friars. The outer black garment is here called the cope, and I suppose l. 230 to refer to it ; i. e. the kirtle was of clean white, but the cope had enough dirt on it for one to grow corn in. The kirtle "appears to have been a kind of tunic or surcoat, and to have resembled the hanberk or coat of mail; it seems in some instances to have been worn next the shirt, if not to serve the purpose of it, and was also used as an exterior garment by pages when they waited on the nobility."—Strutt, Dress and Habits, 349. When Jane Shore did penance, she was "out of all array save her kirtle only."—Holinshed, p. 1135; ed. 1577.

233. The mistake "willen" in MS. A arose from misreading "wiffen." See note to l. 100.

242. euelles, evil-less; but there seems little force in this epithet, and I feel sure the reading is corrupt. The other readings are no better.

247. "It is merely a pardoner's trick; test and try it!"

252. An allusion to the reputation of the Dominicans for scholastic learning.

256. "Three popes, John XXI., Innocent V., and Benedict XI., were all taken from the order of Black Friars, between A.D. 1276-1303."

Massingberd, Eng. Ref., p. 117.

263. in lyknes, by way of parable.

268. The spelling angerlich is the correct one; compare

"The kings law wol no man deme Angerliche without answer."

Comp. of Ploughm. Pol. Poems, i. 323.

271. creatour, creature.

274. "That fully follow the faith, as the gospels tell us, apart from fables, and from mystifications of paraphrases and glosses. For the meaning of glose, compare

"I have to day ben at your chirche at messe,
And sayd a sermoun after my simple wit,
Nought al after the text of holy wryt.
For it is hard for yow, as I suppose,
And therfor wil I teche yow ay the glose.
Glosyng is a ful glorious thing certayn,
For letter sleth, so as we clerkes sayn."

Chaucer, Somp. Tale, l. 80.

276. byhyght, promised.

280. I madde, I grow mad; cf. l. 41.

282. good, property, here and elsewhere.

283. catell, wealth.

285. The spellings vsun, vsune, vson are all bad.

287. "Do naught but proffer them privately a penny for saying a mass, and put out my eye if his lad is not ready to take it." The reading of the old printed copy, "but his name be Prest," i. e. if his name be not Priest, is very absurd. The knaue or lad is the man who followed the begging friars about to carry their earnings.

"A stourdy harlot (fellow) ay went hem byhynde,
That was her hostis man, and bar a sak,

Somynoure's Tale, l. 46.

291. "As towelinge our habite and clothinge, yt is ordeyned that the breddithe of the hode pas not the sholder-boone, and that the lenghte therof pas not the coorde behinde; and the lenghte of the habit shalle nat pas the lenkithe of hym that werethe yt, and the breddith therof haue nat past xvi. spanmys at the most, nor les then xiiij., but-yf the gretnes of the brodre require more after the mynd of the warden, and the lenghte of the slevis shall eum over the vtter joynt of the finger and no further. And the brethern may haue mantellis of vyle and course clothe, not curiously made or pynched aboute the necke, nat towching the ground by a hole spanne." General Statutes of the Gray Friars; Mon. Francisc. p. 575. For pictures of the friars' dresses see Dugdale's Monasticon, last edition.

292. "More eloth is folded in cutting his cope than was in St Francis's froek, when he first established the order."

296. The cote, worn under the cope, was of fur; but it was cut short at the knee, and craftily buttoned close, lest it should be perceiued by the stricter brethren.

298. Among the "articles that Pope Clement saithe that the Bretherne [Franciscans] be bownde to kepe vnder payne of dedly synne," the second is, "that the bretherne shalle were no shone."—Mon. Franc., p. 572. At p. 28 of Mon. Franc. there is a story of one Walter de Madele, a Franciscan of Oxford, who found a pair of shoes and went to matins in them; he dreamt the next night that he was attacked by thieves, and putting out his feet to show that he was a friar, found to his confusion that he was shod. Starting up from bed, he throws his shoes out of the window.

299. for bleyynyng, to prevent blains on their heels.

300. ghamled, cut short at the ancle, so that people should not easily see that they had hose on; such was their crafty device.

301. "And spices scattered loose in their purses (bags), to give away where they liked." Compare

"And also many a dyuers spyse

In bagges about thai bere.

Al that for women is plesand,

Ful redy certes have thai;

But lytel gyfe thai the husband,

That for al shal pay."—Pol. Poems, i. 265

The friars used to bribe the fair wives, to get their good word, thus "throwing away a sprat to catch a whale." See Chaucer, Prol. 233; Somp. Tale, 94—101.

303. knewen men, if men knew; cf. l. 770. The old reading, knownen, is clearly wrong.

304. nought but, only; cf. prov. Eng. nobbut.

308. heremita, not heremite, is the true reading; it is a quotation from Piers Plowman (ed. Wright, p. 312);

"Poul primus heremita

Hadde parroked hymselfe," &c.

For the story of Paul of Thebes who, during the persecution under Decius, fled to a desert on the East of the Nile, and there became the founder of the anchorites or solitary hermits, see Mrs Jameson's Sacred and Legendary Art, vol. II. p. 368.

311. Forto, until. The Carmelites lived as hermits till the Franciscans betook themselves to the poor suburbs of towns; so says their apologist.

324. The alliteration is very defective; it is perhaps eked out by a very strong emphasis on thou and thiselfe.

326. "Thou shalt (at the next meeting of the chapter) have a letter of fraternization granted you, duly sealed." Massingberd says (p. 118) — "Another marvellous way, by which the rich were brought in to share all the graces of poverty, without practising its privations, was by conventual letters, or charters of fraternization; by which the person presented with them was entitled to all the benefit of the prayers, masses, and meritorious deeds of the order." Compare

"Ye sayn me thus, how that I am your brother :

Ye, certes, (quod the frere), trusteth wel ;

I toke our dame the letter, under our sel."

Somp. Tale, l. 426.

328. prouinciall, one who has the direction of the several convents of a province.

336. preyinge of synne, sinful praying.

341. A omits s in aisliche; but the reading of B (aillich) shews that the original had aifliche, f being again confused with l, as at l. 100.

342. on leuest, believest in.

345. halt, holdeth; so we find rit for rideth, fynt for findeth, &c.

347. letten but werken, prevent him from working.

350. For thei ben, whether they be; on to trosten, to trust in.

351. "I would requite thee with thy reward, according to my power."

355. "They are as disdainful as Lucifer, that (for his pride) falls from heaven." Perhaps we should read droppede.

356. "With their hearts (full) of haughtiness, (see) how they hallow churches, and deal in divinity as dogs treat bones."

358. "He had i-made many a fair mariage." Chaucer, Prol. l. 212.

360. In the Complaint of the Ploughman, it is said of the Pope that "He maketh bishops for earthly thanke,

And no thing at all for Christ[e]s sake."

Pol. Poems, vol. i. p. 315.

The context shews that earthly thanke means a bribe.

361. "They wish for honours:—only look at their deeds (and you'll see proofs of it)."

362. I have no doubt, from the context, that these goings-on of the friars at Hertford mean that they cajoled Richard II. and his relatives into granting them money. There was no house of the Black Friars at Hertford itself (there was one of Black Monks), but the allusion is doubtless to their famous convent at King's Langley, in Hertfordshire, the richest (says Dugdale) in all England. Richard II. made no less than three grants to it, and it received large sums from Edmund de Langley (who was born in that town), and from Edmund's first wife. "And 'tis said that this great Lady, having been somewhat wanton in her younger years, became an hearty Penitent, and departed this life anno 1394. 17 R. II. and was buried in this church" (the church of the Black Friars' convent); Chauncy's Hertfordsh., p. 545. Edmund de Langley was also buried here, and so was the king himself. The custom was, to bequeath one's body to a convent for burial, and to bequeath a large sum of money to it at the same time; see II. 408—417. It should be noted, too, that Richard often held a royal Christmas at Langley; he did so certainly in 1392, and again in 1394; see Stow's and Capgrave's Chronicles. This, doubtless, gave the Friars excellent opportunities.

365. See Glossary, s. v. Clawep.

366. "God grant they lead them well, in heavenly living, and cajole them not for their own advantage, to the peril of their (the kings') souls."

374. lefte, remained.

375. digne, disdainful; hence, repulsive; but there is not often much logical sequence or connection in proverbs of this sort. Yet that this is the right explanation is evident from Chaucer; see the Glossary.

378. Als as, all so as, i. e. just as if.

379. leesinges lyeth, lie their lies.

383. See note to l. 29. The friar in the Sompnours Tale seems to have been a Carmelite; see Somp. T. l. 416.

387. by lybbeth, live by.

388. "We know of no subtlety, Christ knows the truth."

393. And, if.

401. to wynnen withe my fode, to earn my food with.

402. lerne, teach; common in prov. English.

405. Catus amat pisces, sed non vult fingere plantam.

406. so—parted, are not given away in that manner.

409. Carefully compare the death-bed scene described fully in Massingberd's Eng. Ref. pp. 165—168; and see also Chaucer's Sompnours Tale.

"Si dives in patria quisquis infirmetur,
Illuc frater properans et currens monetur;
Et statim cum venerit infirmo loquetur,
Ut cadaver mortuum fratribus donetur."

Pol. Poems, vol. i. p. 257.

414. Anuell; see Glossary.

415. "It is God's forbidding but that she die while she is in a mind to share her wealth among us; God let her live no longer, for our letters (of confraternity) are so numerous." It was of course inconvenient that those who had obtained these letters should live long afterwards.

421. "I saw a simple man hang upon (bend over) his plough."

I here venture to quote the whole of the Prologue to the Ploughman's Tale, from an early undated edition. It is much to the point, and was omitted by Mr Wright when reprinting the Plowman's Tale itself.

"Here endeth the Manciples tale, and here beginneth the Plowman's Prologue.

The Plowman plucked vp his plowe
 Whan Midsomer Moone was comen in,
 And saied his bestes shuld eate inowe,
 And lige in the Grasse vp to the chin.
 Thei been feble bothe Oxe and Cowe,
 Of hem nis left but bone and skinne,
 He shoke of her shere and coulter ofdrowe,
 And honged his harnis on a pinne.

He toke his tabarde and his staffe eke,
 And on his hedde he set his hat,
 And saied he would sainen Thomas seke,
 On pilgremage he goth forth plat.
 In scrippe he bare bothe bread and lekes,
 He was forswonke and all forswat ;
 Men miȝt haue sen through both his chekes,
 And euery wang-toth and where it sat.

Our hoste behelde well all about,
 And sawe this men was Sunne ibrent,
 He knewe well by his senged snout,
 And by his clothes that were to-rent,
 He was a man wont to walke about,
 He nas not alwaie in cloister ipent ;
 He could not religionsliche lout,
 And therefore was he fully shent.

Our hoste him axed, ' what man art thou ? '
 ' Sir ' (quod he) ' I am an hine ;
 For I am wont to go to the plow,
 And earne my meate er ¹ that I dine ;
 To swette and swinke I make anowe,
 My wife and children therewith to finde ;
 And serue God and I wist how,
 But we leude men been full blinde.

For clerkes saie we shullen be fain
 For her liuelod swette and swinke,
 And thei right nought vs gine again,
 Neither to eate ne yet to drinke.

Thei mowe by lawe, as thei sain,
 Vs curse and dampne to hell[e] brinke;
 Thus thei putten vs to pain
 With candles queint and belles clinke.

Thei make vs thralles at her lust,
 And sain we mowe not els be saued;
 Thei haue the corne and we the dust,
 Who speaketh there-again, thei saie he raued.
 [Four lines lost.]

‘What? man,’ (quod our hoste) ‘caust thou preache?
 Come nere and tel vs some holy thing.’
 ‘Sir,’ quod he, ‘I heard ones teache
 A priest in pulpit a good preaching.’
 ‘Saie one,’ quod our hoste, ‘I thee beseche.’
 ‘Sir, I am redy at your bidding;
 I praie you that no man me reproche,
 While that I am my tale telling.’

Thus endeth the Prologue, and here foloweth the first parte of the tale.”

425. It means that his shoes were so worn and ill-made that, whilst his toes peeped out, his hose overhung them at the sinews of his heel (hokschyne), and so got bedaubed with mud.

428. as mte, as middling (or poor) as the shoes were. It is the A.S. mate, middling, mean. It being a hard word, the scribe of MS. B erased it, and the old printer misprinted it.

431. worthen, become. The wrong reading worthi may have been an error in the old original text, from which texts A, B, and C are all derived. In Layamon's "Brut" the past participle of the verb worthen, to become, takes the forms iwurðen, iwurden, iworðen, iworþe; and is sometimes used in the exact sense here required, as in—"for alle ure heðene-scipe hæne is iwurðen"—"for all our heathendom is become base."—Layamon, vol. 2, p. 279.

432. reufull, sorry-looking; a great improvement on the old reading rentfull.

436. Compare—"As two of them [Minorites] were going into a neighbouring wood, picking their way along the rugged path over the frozen mud and rigid snow, whilst the blood lay in the track of their naked feet without their perceiving it," &c.—Mon. Franc. p. 632.

437. laye; the old printed text has lath; this is because the printer misread laye as lape.

443. "At heiz prime perkyn · lette þe plouȝ stonde."—Piers Pl. A. vii. 105.

445. "If livelihood (i. e. means of living) fail thee, I will lend thee such wealth as God hath sent; come, dear brother." Go we (= come along) was a common exclamation; cf. "go we dyne, gowe," Piers Pl. A. prol. 105.

452. "For there I expected to have known (it)."

456. "Attendite a falsis prophetis, qui veniunt ad vos in vestimentis ovium, intrinsecus autem sunt lupi rapaces." Mat. vii. 15 (Vulgate).

459. werwolves, lit. man-wolves, Fr. loup-garous, from the Teutonic wer, a man, which was modified into gar in Norman-French. For a full discussion of the etymology, see Glossary to Sir F. Madden's edition of "William and the Werwolf," a re-issue of which I am now preparing for the E. E. T. S. For a full discussion of the very prevalent mediæval superstition, that men could be turned into peculiarly ferocious wolves, see "A Book on Werwolves," by S. Baring Gould, and Thorpe's Northern Mythology.

462. Curates, parish-priests with a cure of souls. The friars were continually interfering with and opposing them.

"———unnethe may prestes seculers
Gete any service, for thes frers," &c.

Pol. Poems, i. 267.

468. confessions, i. e. the right of hearing confessions, and being paid for so doing.

469. sepultures, burials. They used to get people to order in their wills that they should be buried in a convent-church, and then they would be paid for the singing of masses for them.

471. he loketh, they look for, look out for.

477. "I trow that some wicked wight wrought these orders through the subtlety of the tale called Golias; or else it was Satan," &c. A satire on the monkish orders, called Apocalypsis Golie, may be found among the poems by Walter Mapes, &c., edited by Mr Wright for the Camden Society. The idea expressed in l. 479 is this:—perhaps, after all, that satire of Golias was written as an artful contrivance for bringing about the disrepute of the monks, and the rise of the mendicant orders. It is certain that the friars succeeded at first because the monks had become so dissolute, but it is not likely that this particular poem had much to do with it. Gleym = bird-lime, and hence subtlety, craft, guile. It is a strong metaphor, but explained by our author's own words in l. 564; "I liken it to a limed twig, to draw men to hell."

486. Cain's name was generally spelt Caim or Caym in Early English: whence Wycliffe declared that the letters C, A, I, M meant the Carmelites, Augustines, Jacobins, and Minorites, and he delighted in calling the convents "Caim's castles," an idea which appears below, at l. 559. It was common to call wicked people Cain's children or Judas's children; see Piers Pl. A. prol. 35, and x. 149.

"Nou se the sothe whedre it be swa,
That frere Carmes come of a K,
The frer Austynes come of A,
Frer Jacobynes of I,
Of M comen the frer Menours
Thus grounded Caym thes four ordours

That fillen the world ful of errours,
And of ypocrisy."—Pol. Poems, i. 265.

487. The Wycliffites were never tired of comparing the friars to Pharisees; ll. 487—502 and 546—584 are entirely devoted to this comparison. This comparison, and the one in l. 456, are both found in the Apology attributed to Wycliffe. feyned for gode, feigned to be good men. The old printed text has "Sarysenes, feyned for God."

489. kynde ypocrites, natural hypocrites, hypocrites by nature.

492. wo worthe you, wo happen to you; worthe is the imperative of wurthen, to become, to happen.

498. Cf. note to l. 574.

499. Cf. note to l. 554.

503. "Her (their) high maister is Beliall."—Pol. Poems, i. 310.

507. Cf. note to l. 462.

510. The old reading derulich, secretly, gives no sense; deruelich means laboriously, industriously. Thus in Allit. Poenis (ed. Morris, E. E. T. S.), p. 56, l. 632, Abraham tells his servant to see the a kid, "And he deruely, at his dome, dyȝt lyt bylyue;" and he industriously, at his bidding, got it ready soon.

516. vnteyned, bad spelling for vntyned, unfastened. It occurs in this sense in the following: "næs ther duru ontyned, ne weall to-slyten, ne eah-thyrl geopened;" there was no door unfastened, nor wall rent through, nor window opened. MS. C.C.C. 196, p. 43

518. bare, barren.

521. pouere in gost, poor in spirit. "Gostly pouert is sum tyme wan a thing hath litil of sum spirit; and thus was Crist most pore, for he had lest of the spirit of prid."—Apology attributed to Wycliffe, p. 41; cf. Sompnours Tale, l. 215.

523. Proue hem, i. e. try the experiment of proving them.

528. For a brief summary of Wycliffe's charges against the friars, see Massingberd, Eng. Ref, p. 139; or consult Lewis's or Le Bas' life of Wycliffe; or, better still, Wycliffe's own Two treatises against the Friars, edited by James; 4to, Oxford, 1608. He died Dec. 31, 1384, at Lutterworth.

532. To lolle properly means, to profess the doctrines of Wycliffe; and "oueral lollde him" = especially accused him of lolling. See the poem against the Lollards, in Pol. Poems, ii. 245, where we find

"And, parde, lolle thei never so longe, Yut wol lawe make hem lowte;"

and again, "double dethe for suyche lollynge." A loller means a sluggard, an idle vagabond; see Piers Plowman (ed. Wright), pp. 514, 527. In the Complaint of the Ploughman the term is applied, not to the Wycliffites, but to the friars, who are "Icleped lollers and londlese;" Pol. Poems, i. 305. At the same time, the term Lollard was freely applied to the so-called heretics, and had been used in Germany as early as 1309. The latter word was probably formed from Ger. lullen or lallen, to stammer, mumble (Ducange gives "Lollaerd, mussitator,") but the two words loller and Lollard were purposely confused, to the no small perplexity of modern inquirers.

536. "If you can find four friars in one convent that follow that rule, why, then, I've lost all my powers of tasting, touching, and testing."

538—545. In all former editions, these lines have been rendered mere nonsense by the absurd insertion of a full stop at the end of l. 543. But the construction is just the same as in ll. 536-7; and the sentence is framed in the same ironical strain. It means, "Only find fault with them ever so little, and blame their mode of life, and if he does not leap up on high in hardness of heart, and at once call you a thing of naught, and revile your name openly with proud words that transgress his rule, both with 'thou liest' and again 'thou liest,' in his haughtiness of soul, and turn about like a tyrant that torments himself—if he does not do this, why then I'll admit that a lord is more loath to give to a knave than to such a begging friar as he is, though he be the best in the town." In other words, "we know that a lord would rather give to a knave than to a friar; but, if my words be not true, consider the order of all things as inverted, and that a lord is more loath to give to a knave than to a friar." Such a construction is difficult to explain on paper, but a good reader would bring out the force of it easily enough.

550. chapolories, scapulars. The writer cleverly substitutes the scapulars of the friars for the phylacteries of the Pharisees. The scapular (Fr. scapulaire, Ital. scapolare) was so called because thrown over the shoulders. Compare the words of Jack Upland—"What betokeneth your great hood, your scaplerie, your knotted girdle, and your wide cope?"—Pol. Poems, ii. 19. This word has been queerly misunderstood; Richardson thought it meant a chapeltry, and inserted this line in his dictionary under "Chapel." But the spellings scaplory and scapelary are both given in the Promptorium Parvulorum, and the alteration into chapolory is less remarkable than the spelling of chaff in l. 663, viz. schaf; and see note to l. 684.

554. Compare

"Priestes should for no catell plede,
But chasten hem in charitè;
Ne to no battaile should men lede,
For inhaunsing of her own degree;
Nat wilne sittings in high see,
Ne soueraignty in house ne hall;
All wordly worship defie and flee;
For who willeth highnes, foule shal fall."

Ploughman's Complaint, Pol. Poems, i. 306.

559 See note to l. 486.

564. So in Piers Plowman (ed. Wright), p. 170—"For lecherie in likyng is lyme-yerd of helle."

569. her propre, their own.

571. "Except money may make measure of (i. e. may moderate) the pain, according as his power of payment is,—his penance shall fail ; and God grant it be a good help (i. e. a heavy payment) for the health of the souls."

574. "Now maister (quod this lord) I yow biseke.—
No maister, sir (quod he) but servitour,
Though I have had in scole such honour.
God likith not that Raby men us calle
Neyther in market, neyther in your large halle."

Somproures Tale, l. 484.

So too in the Comp. of the Ploughman ; Pol. Poems, i. 337.

577. The sense is carried on from forzotten this to Wher in l. 579.
"Friars have forgotten this, viz. whether Francis," &c.

583. and—liste, and choose when it suits him ; meaning, I suppose, that he chooses his own hours for service, &c.

586. "He touches not the text itself, but takes it to found his glosses on."

591. Stumlen in tales, flounder about in his legends of the saints, * instead of preaching God's word.

593. "And look out (find out) for themselves lying stories, such as please the people."

597. a lymitour ; see Chaucer, Prol. l. 209. "It was, of course, however, necessary to regulate the system of begging alms. . . . This was effected by assigning districts to each convent, within which its members were to take their rounds, and generally each individual friar had his own limits prescribed ; whence the name that was commonly given to them of limitors. When the system was established, the alms of bread, bacon, and cheese, logs of wood for their fire, and other ordinary gifts, were ready for the friar when he called." Massingberd, Eng. Ref. p. 110.

603. Wherto, wherefore, answering to But for in l. 605.

608. The old printer, misreading Y as þ, and supposing þ to stand for þe or þei, turned Y-cloped into Thei clothed.

610. onlie, singularly, in a way peculiar to themselves, "neither in order nor out," as we read in l. 45 ; cf. also l. 534.

613. for, before.

614. clap, cloth. The adjective pur, pure, clean, shews that cloth is meant ; besides, they would not be put in clay when "near dead," but only after death. The mis-reading clay in A is easily explained ; the writer simply mistook þ to mean y, just as, by a common blunder, y^e and y^t occur often in C for the and that. The reading cleye in B is due to the same thing, only that here the scribe also changed the spelling at his own good pleasure, as he has very unwisely done throughout the MS. The announcement in this line that friars, when near dead, were wrapped up in white cloth, and had pots put on their heads, is strange and startling, and a reference to l. 627 seems to shew that there existed a system of disposing of useless friars by a process not very different from suffocation ; but it would be desirable to have more light thrown upon this passage from other sources. A request for further explanation was inserted in Notes and Queries, 3rd S. xi. p. 277, but has elicited, as yet, no reply.

623. "Or maimed by accident, or sick lepers." The old text has mayned for maymed, and lyke for syke, a mistake due to reading the long s (f) as an l, as in ll. 100, 233, and 341.

626. "Except he beg his bread, his bed is got ready for him; he shall be put under a pot in a secret chamber so that he shall not live or last long after." Cf. ll. 614, 732.

631. "But whosoever hath scoffed at a friar," &c.

633. "It were as good for him to have displeased a wealthy lord."

635. compased his morthor, contrived his murder; the old printed text has mother; had the author meant mother, he would have written moder; see l. 2.

636. "Than if he had bestowed a buffet on a begging friar."

641. this, this law; an other, another law.

642. "That which they catch hold of, they hold tight, [and] soon hide it away."

643, 644. Difficult; but the meaning seems to be—"Their hearts are fully hid (from the world's wealth) in their high cloisters—quite as much as curs abstain from refuse carrion!" In other words, they no more devote their minds to contemplation and abstain from coveting, than a dog abstains from carrion.

648, 649. The reading wilfuller (of MS. B) gives the right sense; the readings wilfullok(e)r and folloke are easily accounted for by remembering that the old spelling of wilfuller would be wilfulloker, just as lightloker (= lightlier), sadloker (= sadder), and many other such comparative forms, occur continually in old authors, as, e. g. in Piers Plowman. The wil was dropped in the old printed text because the repetition of it looked wrong, and the final r, which may have been obscurely written, went with it. The sense is; "just test their soberness, and you may soon know that no wasp in the world will sting more fiercely, [than they will sting you] for stepping on the toe of a stinking friar." But there is probably a line lost between ll. 648 and 649.

655. pursut of, prosecution (of heretics) by.

657. Wat is no doubt the right reading; the reading Water arose from adding er, and forgetting to put in the l. Wat is the common form, and was a very common name; cf. Piers Plowman, A. v. 30. Walter Brute was a Welsh gentleman, who called into question the doctrines of the power of the keys, auricular confession, pardons, &c., and declared that pretended miracles ought to be carefully examined into. In particular he protested, Oct. 15, 1391, against the condemnation, for heresy, of William Swinderby; on Jan. 19, 1391-2, he confessed to having communicated with the said heretic; on Friday, Oct. 3, 1393, he appeared before the bishop of Hereford, who had prosecuted him unceasingly, for final trial, and on the succeeding Monday, Oct. 6, he submitted himself to the same, not without having well defended many of his opinions. A long account of his defence will be found in Foxe's Acts and Monuments, vol. 3, pp. 131—188 (ed. Cattle, 1841). Fuller speaks of Walter Brute as one of the "Worthies of Wales."

659. I venture to read hym, as the sense requires; hem must have been copied from the line above. Brute having submitted himself to the bishop, the friars partly failed in their object; but they still tell men, says our author, that he is a heretick, and go on preaching against him. This use of the present tense helps greatly to fix the date of the poem in 1394. Compare the account of William Swinderby in Massingberd's Eng. Ref. p. 172.

660. Compare

"Whoso speketh ayenst her powere,
It shal be holden heresie."

Compl. Ploughm., Pol. Poems, i. 329.

663. Imitated from Piers Plowman, A. i. 167,

"Chewen heore charite, and chiden after more!"

So here, "They gobble down their charity as hounds do bran," and no more is seen of it. Schaf, chaff; prob. put for bran, with which dogs used to be commonly fed. Notes and Queries, 3rd S. xi. 191.

664. passen pursutes, exceed all other persecutions, i. e. they both wish to murder men's souls after burning their bodies, and they would do it too! A Wicliffite is threatened with the words,

"Thou shalt be brent in balefull fire,

And all thy sect I shall destric."—Pol. Poems, i. 341.

But such a threat was not carried out till a few years later, when William Sautre was burnt in Smithfield, Feb. 26, 1401.

670. "They nold nat demen after the face."—Compl. Ploughm., Pol. Poems, i. 325.

681. "Possessioneres, i. e. the regular orders of monks, who possessed landed property and enjoyed rich revenues. The friars were forbidden by their rule to possess property, which they only did under false pretences; they depended for support on voluntary offerings."—Cant. Tales, ed. Wright, p. 82, foot-note.

"Suehe annuels has made thes frers

So wely and so gay,

That thier may no possessioners

Mayntene thair array."—Pol. Poems, i. 267.

684. I venture to read chesen. The original text probably had schesen, altered in MS. A to schosen. The strange spelling schesen is paralleled by schaf for chaf, and chuldest for schuldest in l. 124.

691. Aldermen, an allusion to the twenty-four elders, Rev. iv. 4; we read "et mittebant coronas suas ante thronum" in ver. 10 (Vulgate).

695. Alluding to the dress of the Dominicans; see note to l. 29.

703. "I suppose this refers to St Hildegardis, a nun who flourished in the middle of the twelfth century, and who was celebrated among the Roman Catholics as a prophetess. Her prophecies are not uncommon in manuscripts, and they have been printed. Those which relate to the future corruptions in the monkish orders are given in Foxe's Acts and Monuments, book vi., and in other works."—Mr Wright's note to this line. St Hildegarde was abbess of St Rupert's mount, near Bingen; born A.D. 1098, died in 1180. See Neander's Church History, vii. 291-5 (ed. Torrey).

705. Cf. note to l. 468. Innocent III. made confession compulsory, once a year at least.

710. after vsed, (perhaps) used after, i. e. followed after, held to, practised accordingly. But it is an awkward expression.

713. So in Piers Plowman, A. viii. 3, "And purchasede him a pardoun A pena et a culpa." Such was the usual phrase.

716. "And they deal with loans and biddings;" see Gloss. s. v. lone and bode.

719. Alludes to the Franciscans; gray was the original colour of their habit, but after a time dark-brown was introduced. "On St George's day, 1502, they relinquished the London russet which they had for some time worn, and resumed the undyed white-grey which had been their original habit."—Greyfriar's Chronicle, Pref., p. xiv.

724. biggen may either mean buy, or construct.

725. And als, and according as.

729. furste-froyt, first-fruits. Cf. Sompnoures Tale, l. 577.

738. scon, better spelt schon, shoes. The old text has stone! Sc and St are often hardly distinguishable in MSS.

744. soutere his, put for soateres, cobbler's.

748. bychop, bishop. The alliteration requires this word, but the old printed text has abbot. Such an alteration must have been made by the printer of set purpose. Compare

"For to lords they woll be liche,
An harlots sonne not worth an hawe!"

Pol. Poems, i. 312.

750. Compare

"Lords also mote to them loute," &c.

Pol. Poems, i. 308.

758. faytours. Mr Wright's edition has forytours, which he supposes a mistake in the old text. But forytours is an error of his printer, for all three of the other editions have faytours, as in the MSS.

761. "No one could sit down to meat, high or low, but he must ask a friar or two, who when they came would play the host to themselves, and carry away bread and meat besides."—qu. in Massingberd, Eng. Ref., p. 110.

763. randes, strips, slices. The old text has bandes. This improves the alliteration, but it does not appear that there is any such word. See Glossary.

764. Compare

"With chaunge of many manner meates,
With song and solas sitting long," &c.

Pol. Poems, i. 307.

769. "Fitzralph, in his Apology at Avignon, accused them of 'philosophising' in the chambers of the most beautiful maidens; and Eccleston says, that even so early as his time, Friar Walter of Reigate confessed that these familiarities were one of the ways by which the foul fiend vexed the order."—Massingberd, Eng. Ref., p. 110. Cf. Piers Plowman (ed. Wright), p. 445. And the following—

"Iche man that here shal lede his life,
That has a faire doghter or a wyfe,
Be-war that no frer ham shryfe,
Nauther loud nor stille."—Pol. Poems, i. 265.

771. homly, familiarly. Mr Wright has holy.

777. Helye, Elias.

782. "have laid it in water," i. e. drowned it, sunk it. Hire is used because rewele is feminine.

784. Ne were, If it were not for.

785. Compare

"Had they been out of religion,
They must have hanged at the plowe,
Threshing and diking fro tounne to tounne
With sorrie meat, and not halfe ynowe."

Pol. Poems, i. 335.

808. When Christ descended into hell, he fetched out Adam and the patriarchs, and led them with him to heaven. This was called the Harrowing of Hell; the story is given in the apocryphal gospel of Nicodemus, and is repeated at great length in Piers Plowman.

810. steiz, ascended.

816. generall, i. e. Catholic, universal. So in p. 1 of the Apology attributed to Wycliffe, we find the "general feith," meaning the Catholic faith.

817—821. These five lines are certainly spurious. They are in neither of the MSS., and are found only in the old printed copy. The reason for inserting them was a wish to conceal the fact that five lines had been suppressed which are found in both the MSS.; viz., ll. 822, 823, and 828—830, and which are now printed for the first time. The reason for suppressing them was that they appear to contain the doctrine of transubstantiation, and as the object of printing the book at all was to attack the Romish party, it would never have done to retain these lines. Hence ll. 817—821 were forged; but the forger of them, though he has given us five lines which imitate the author's style very ingeniously, did not truly understand the laws of alliterative verse, and formed ll. 817—819 on a wrong principle, putting two of the rime-letters into the second half of the line, and only one into the first half, whereas the usual practice is the contrary to this. True, lines of this type do occur, as e. g. at l. 26, but they are very rare, and only admissible as a variation. To allow three such lines to follow each other is against all ordinary usage. But this is not the only difficulty. There is really no place where ll. 817—

821 can properly come in. To insert them where I have done involves the absurdity of putting Amen in the middle of a sentence; whilst to insert them any where else only makes matters still worse. Again, the suppression of the genuine lines rendered ll. 824—827 and ll. 831—839 meaningless, and I will venture to say that no one has hitherto been able to make out to what they can possibly refer. But the mystery is now cleared up; they discuss the doctrine of transubstantiation.

822. "And I believe in the sacrament too, that the very God is in both flesh and blood fully, who suffered death for us." Sacremens (MS. A) should be sacrement, as in MS. B. On = upon, in; A.S. on. Cf. the phrases leuest on, believest in, l. 342; leue on, believe in, l. 795. The word in in l. 815 is exactly equivalent to the word on in l. 799.

825. deyte, divinity, divine presence. MS. B has diet. Supposing the author of the Crede to have written the Complaint of the Ploughman, we find his views expressed thus:—

"On our Lords body I doe not lie,
I say sooth through true rede,
His flesh and blood through his misterie
Is there, in the forme of brede :

How it is there it needeth not strive,
Whether it be subget or accident,
But as Christ was when he was on-live,
So is he there verament."—Pol. Poems, i. 341.

Such was the position of the Wycliffites. They denied the extreme form of the doctrine as declared by the friars, maintaining that whilst Christ was bodily present, the bread never ceased to remain bread; how this could be was a thing, they said, not to be explained. See Wycliffe's "Wicket."

847. The Complaint of the Ploughman ends in a very similar manner; the author even introduces the same word avow = guarantee, hold to.

"Witeth the pellican and not me,
For hereof I will not avow ;
In high ne in low, ne in no degree,
But as a fable take it ye mowe.
To holy church I will me bow
Ech man to amend him Christ send space ;
And for my writing me allow
He that is almighty for his grace."

Pol. Poems, i. 346.

God spede the Plough.

(Lansdowne MS. 762; fol. 5 a.)

A PROCESSE OR AN EXORTATION TO TENDRE THE CHARGIS OF THE TRUE HUSBONDYS.

As I me walked ouer feldis wide ¹
When men began to Ere and to Sowe,
I behelde husbondys howe faste they hide,
With their bestis and plowes all on A rowe;
I stode and behelde the bestis well drawe
To ere the londe that was so tough;
Than to an husbond I sed this sawe,
“I pray to God, spede wele the plough.”

As I went over the fields in ploughing time, I saw husbandmen
at work, and said “God speed the plough!”

The husbondys helde vp harte and hande,
And said, “that is nedefull for to praye;
For all the yere we labour with the [lande],
With many a comberous clot of [claye],²
To mayntayn this worlde yf that we maye,
By downe and by dale and many a slough;
Therefore it is nedefull for to saye,
‘I praye to God, spede wele the plough.’

One of them answered—“It is needful to say so; we have hard work of it.”

NOTES.

THE MS. (Lansdowne, 762) from which this poem is taken is a sort of album or collection of scraps, not all in the same handwriting. There is little doubt but that this copy of "God speed the Plough," belongs to the reign of Henry the Eighth, for in the same hand there is a table of Kings of England, with verses about them, which ends with saying that Henry the Seventh was buried at Westminster. At the same time, Mr Hamilton thinks the handwriting to be not very late, but to belong to the early part of Henry the Eighth's reign. The poem itself does not seem to be much earlier; and the complaints of the exactions made by the King's purveyors, bailiffs, beadles, the summoner and the "grenewex," seem particularly suitable to the reign of Henry the Seventh. As a conjectural date, A.D. 1500 may not be very far from the truth. Another poem, written much in the style of "Speed the Plough," has for its burden the line,

"London, thowe arte the flowre of cities all;" (fol. 8).

1. Even without the "guide-line," we can tell by the structure of the stanza that the line written in the margin is really l. 1. The 2nd, 4th, 5th, and 7th lines of each stanza rhyme together throughout.

22. Groweth. This seems a strange rhyme to plough. Perhaps it should be growe = grew.

28. Wright, in his Provincial Dictionary, quotes the following:—

"A false theefe

That came, like a false foxe, my pullain to kill and mischeefe."

Gammer Gurton, Old Pl. ii. 63.

43. The words within square brackets are conjectural, and were suggested by the fact recorded in Piers Plowman, that getting pardon for a bribe even from a King is not altogether a thing unknown; see Piers Pl. Text A. Pass. III. ll. 16—20, and IV. ll. 120—125 (ed. Skeat, 1867).

45. Frery, friary, fraternity; there was one such in Clerkenwell.

49. See note to the "Crede," l. 29. On fol. 9 b of this very Lansdowne MS. we find the following. "Fratres London. Whitefreres in fletestrete, Carmelitarum. Blak freres within ludgate, predicatorum vel Jacob: Greye freres within newgate, Minorum. Augusteyn freres by saint Antonyes, Augustinencium. Crowched freres, Fratres sancte Crucis."

67. This line is too long. The word "behyade" is superfluous.

74. Scala celi. Compare—

"In þat place a chapelle ys,

Scala cely called hit ys,

'Laddere of heuen' men clepeþ hit."

The Stacjons of Rome, in Political, Religious, and Love Poems,
p. 118 (E. E. T. S.)

On which Mr Rossetti has the note, "The chapel Scala celi stands near the foregoing church of St Anastatius. It was built over the cemetery of St Zeno, and has undergone restorations from 1582 onwards. It derives its name from a vision of St Bernard's, who, while celebrating a funeral mass, saw the souls for whom he was praying going up to heaven by a ladder."

We should compare with this poem the feeling expressed in the Spanish proverb—" Lo que no lleva Christo, lleva el fisco"; that which Christ (i.e. the clergy) takes not, the exchequer carries away. Lines 75, 76 remind us of Chaucer's clerk of Oxenford, who

"busily gan for the soules pray

Of hem that gaf him wherewith to scolay."

85. These chartered beggars remind us of Edie Ochiltree, the King's Bedesman, with his blue gown and pewter badge, in Sir Walter Scott's novel of the Antiquary; see vol. I. ch. iv.

It should be noted that the word plough is made to rime with tough, slough, growth (groice?), bough, and enough (S times). The probable pronunciation seems to be the same as now-a-days, s'ough and bough being still admissible rimes. In the Trinity MS. of "Piers Plowman" (classmark R. 3. 14) there is a picture of two "husbondys" with a plough and two "bestis," with a motto written above, which runs—"God spede þe plouȝ & send us korne I-now"—where I-now represents the old pronunciation of enough. In the MS. of the same poem in Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, the same motto occurs, but without the picture.

PARALLEL EXTRACTS FROM TWENTY-NINE MSS.

PIERS PLOWMAN,

With Comments, and a Proposal for the Society's Three-text Edition of the Poem,

BY THE REV. W. W. SKEAT, M.A., LATE FELLOW OF CHRIST'S COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE.

IN order to do full justice to the poem known as Piers Plowman, the most valuable work in Early English Literature before Chaucer wrote, the Committee of the Early English Text Society have resolved to print an edition of the three best texts of the poem separately, the first of which, transcribed from the Vernon MS. at Oxford, is to appear in 1867. With the view of obtaining information as to the language, age, and type of every known MS. of the Poem, the Committee have, on Mr Furnivall's suggestion, resolved to print one and the same passage from every MS. which the goodwill of Librarians and owners of collections may place at their disposal, so that, by a collation of these extracts, the relative dialectal peculiarities, ages, and types of the MSS. themselves may be determined, and attention afterwards concentrated on those most likely to yield the most valuable results. The Committee, then, appeal to every one who has a MS. of this noble Poem under his control, to render them their assistance in carrying out the great work they have in hand. Only by the aid of men widely scattered over the land can the work be accomplished, and the Committee are sure that their appeal will not be left without response by any one who remembers how the old poem has called up before him the picture of his forefathers' life, and shown him the earnestness with which they strove for Truth amidst the many corruptions of their time. Moreover, every reader of MSS. who knows of what value even this present collection of extracts is, will desire to add to the value it has for the makers of it, and for others as well as himself.

The first thing, then, that is asked, is, a copy from any and every MS. of Piers Plowman to which the reader may have access, of the lines 1508—1529 in Wright's edition, 1856, vol. i. p. 47,—the passage corresponding to that from the numerous MSS. printed in the table at the end of this tract.

These lines have been chosen as a test-passage on account of their containing several verbal plurals, and in order to see whether any MSS. are consistent in the use of the Southern th, the Midland n or e, or the Northern s in the present plural indicative. The Rev. H. O. Coxe has most kindly made the extracts from the Oxford Bodleian MSS., and Mr W. Aldis Wright those from the Cambridge University Library and Trinity College; whilst the editor contributes those from Corpus and Caius Colleges, and from the Oxford colleges, and Mr Furnivall is responsible for the British Museum extracts, the dates of the MSS. of which have been fixed by Mr E. A. Bond, of the MS. department, whose valued help is here gratefully acknowledged. The Dublin extract was kindly furnished by Dr Lottner.

The texts have been stated to be of two types, distinguished by their readings of the first twenty lines,—those which, like Whitaker's, make the dreamer to have slept "in a lande as he lay," and those which, like Wright's, make him to have rested "under a broode bank by a bournes syde;" but two texts of the same type (as ascertained by the foregoing test) are found to contain different versions of subsequent passages, while two of different types will coincide in such passages.

This test is, in fact, thus shown to be insufficient, and the editor of the proposed new edition has suggested the further test of observing the beginning of Passus VI. If the MS. is of the latter of the above types, the first line of this Passus is either

This were a wikkede wey
but who so hadde a gyde, &c.;

see Wright's ed. vol. i. p. 117 ; or else

The kyng and hise knyghtes to the kirke wente, &c. ;

see Wright's ed., vol. i. p. 77 ; the difference being here caused simply by a variation in the method of numbering the Passus. If, however, the MS. be of the former or Whitaker type, we find here a long passage of great interest, which does not appear in the other MSS., commencing Thus ich awaked, God wot !

wanne ich wonede on Cornhulle Kytte and ich in a cote, see Wright's ed., vol. ii. p. 514, in the notes.

But a further separation of the MSS. can easily be made, so as to distribute them not only into two distinct classes, but into three. A close and careful scrutiny of several MSS. shows that those which most resemble the one printed by Mr Wright can be separated into two kinds, which may very conveniently be named the Vernon and Crowley types. The first of these is best exemplified by the text of the Vernon MS. at Oxford, and it is remarkable as presenting the earliest or original version of the poem. It is easily recognized by observing that it omits many long passages, and, in particular, the one containing the story of the rats in the introductory Passus. It also contains very few Latin quotations, and does not extend much beyond ten Passus, though it is sometimes supplemented by a later text. Its readings are, in general, peculiarly good, and the sense more simple and distinct than in later versions. Examples of it are presented by the Vernon MS., by Harl. 875, Harl. 6041, Trinity II., MS. Digby 145, and the MS. in University College, Oxford. The Crowley type is adopted as a convenient name for the MSS. which resemble the text printed by Crowley in 1550, to which class the one printed by Mr Wright also belongs. The three texts, then, are (1) those of the Vernon type ; (2) those of the Crowley type ; and (3) those of the Whitaker type. It is proposed to publish one of each kind in the above order, so as to show the gradual development of the poem from its briefest into its most elaborate form. The text printed by Whitaker is probably by no means the best of its class, and it is therefore very desirable to find out which is so. That chosen by Mr Wright is a very good one, and perhaps no better may be found, but great assistance will be afforded by any one who will undertake to make a careful comparison of a good MS. with the printed text, so as to make this point secure. It has been suggested that two of the texts might be exhibited in parallel columns, but the extraordinary differences in the arrangement of the subject-matter in them renders it doubtful if this is possible or expedient. The editor will, however, endeavour to give such copious references (in the two later texts at least) as will enable the reader to compare readily the various corresponding passages.

The most frequent fault in the MSS. is the omission of lines. It will therefore perhaps be sometimes found necessary to supplement the texts by readings from other MSS. of the same class. Examples of this sort of omission are easily pointed out in the texts already printed. Thus, after l. 338 (Wright, p. 11),

And right so, quod that raton, reson me sheweth,
 To bugge a belle of bras,
 or of bright silver,
 And knydden it on a coler
 for oure commune profit,

the line in Whitaker,

And honge aboute þe cattys halse
 þanne hure we mowe, must of course be inserted in Wright, as being the very one on which the whole point of the story turns; whilst, on the other hand, Whitaker omits the line below (Wright, l. 357, p. 11),

Alle helden hem un-hardy and hir counseil feble, which is, of course, necessary. Putting for awhile the Vernon text aside, and examining only the two printed texts, it deserves to be carefully remarked that the variations between them are far more numerous and important than has been supposed, as may be seen from the following analysis of pp. 1—14 of Wright's text as compared with Whitaker. The numbers below refer to the lines in Wright's text (2nd ed., 1856).

Thus, ll. 3, 4, 11, 12, 17—32, 67—74, 122—124, 132, 153, 154, 177—180, 189—192, 221, 222, 236—240, 242, 243, 408—413, and 439 stand differently in Whitaker.

Wright has these lines, which Whitaker omits utterly, 13—16, 99—104, 211, 212, 229, 230, 245—248, 255—262, 273, 274, 277—290, 303, 304, 317, 318, 324—328, 357, 358, 382—399, and 440—443.

On the other hand, Whitaker inserts 2 (half) lines after l. 28; a long passage, 60 (half) lines after l. 192, about Hoplni and Phineas (cf. l. 6187, &c.); 2 (half) lines after l. 338; and 2 (half) lines after l. 429.

Nor is even this all; for the ll. 418—429 are transposed in Whitaker's text so as to follow l. 276.

It is obviously very desirable to ascertain whether all the MSS. of each supposed type follow the same differences of arrangement, &c.; and whether any new MS. of value can be anywhere discovered. The present tract is put forth in the hope of obtaining further information on these points.

A few further points of difference between the two above types are here added, with references to Wright's edition.

P. 1, ll. 1—20; p. 12, ll. 382—399 (which are not in Whitaker's text); p. 54, ll. 1735—1760 (different in Whitaker); p. 80, l. 2569, where Whitaker has a passage, the counterpart of which is transferred by Wright to ll. 6218—6274; p. 88, l. 2846 (after which follows, in Whitaker's text, a description of Luxury or Lecherie); p. 106, l. 3442 (after which follows, in Whitaker's text, the passage given in Wright's notes, vol. ii. p. 522); p. 112, ll. 4624—4658 (which stands very differently in Whitaker; see Wright's notes, vol. ii. p. 526); p. 145, l. 4695 (after which Whitaker inserts a long and note-worthy passage; see Wright's notes, vol. ii. p. 528); p. 161, ll. 5216—5432, where the texts greatly vary; p. 175, where besides several variations, the ll. 5675—5703 are quite lost in Whitaker, as is also the case with ll. 5987—6050. After the Latin quotation on p. 188

l. 6112, Whitaker's text very soon jumps to the beginning of Passus Undecimus, p. 202 ; but part of the intervening matter is found in Whitaker nevertheless, some of it (ll. 6213—6270) at a very much earlier place, and another fragment (ll. 6366—6548) at a much later, though the differences in the two texts are hereabouts far too numerous to be mentioned here. Continual variations occur, until the end of Passus XVI. is reached ; but from this point to the end, pp. 348—448, the agreement of the two texts is remarkably close. Whitaker has, however, nothing corresponding to ll. 11572—11618, whilst he has additional lines between l. 11899 and 11900, and also the curious lines given below (where guns are mentioned) between l. 12621 and 12622 ; and it is partly because of the close coincidence of the texts in this latter part of the poem that these last lines constitute an excellent test-passage.

Special attention should be paid to the following remarkable passages: (1) p. 47, ll. 1508—1529, the passage now printed, useful as containing so many plural forms, and in which the first four (short) lines stand differently in Whitaker's text;—(2) p. 262, ll. 8561—8576 (not in Whitaker) which is to fix in some measure the date of the poem :

“ Al¹ Londone, I leve, liketh wel my wafres,
 And louren whan thei lakken hem.
 it is noght longe y-passed,
 There was a careful commune,
 whan no cart com to towne
 With breed fro Stratforde ;
 tho gonnen beggeris wepe
 And werkmen were agast a lite, this wole be thought longe.
 In the date of oure Drichte,
 in a drye Aprille,
 A thousand and thre hundred twies twenty and ten,²

² MS. Laud. 581 has “ twies thretty and ten.”

My wafres there were gesene whan Chichestre was maire ;”

if, indeed, the passage is not a later interpolation, for in the last two lines the alliteration breaks down utterly ;—(3) p. 77, Passus V., called in Whitaker Passus VI., where Wright omits the passage commencing “Thus ich awaked, God wot !” &c., in which the author is, or pretends to become, autobiographical ;—(4) p. 54, ll. 1734—1760 (not in Whitaker), which alludes to Edward’s wars in Normandy ; and (5) as a specimen of Whitaker’s text (it is not in Wright) the following passage containing an allusion to guns, and which, as compared with Milton, Paradise Lost, book 6, l. 470, is a literary curiosity. It describes how Satan exhorts his fellows to resist Christ’s entry into hell.

“Ae rys up, Ragamoffyn, and reche me alle þe barres
That Belial þe beel-syre beot with þy damme,
And ich shal lette þis lorde,
and hus light stoppe ;
Ar we þow bryghtnesse be blent,
barre we þe ȝates,
Cheke we and cheyne we,
and eche chyne stoppe
þat no light leopen yn at lover ne at loupe.
And þow, Astrot, hot out,
and have oute knaves,
Coltyng and al hus kynne,
our catel to save !
Brynston boilaunt,
brenning out casteþ hit
Al hot in here hevedes, þat entren in ny þe walles !
Setteþ bowes of brake
a brasene gonnes,

And shetep out shot ynowh has shultrom to blende !
 Sette Mahon at the mangonel,
 and mulle-stones prowep,
 Whith crokes and with kalketrappes
 a-cloye we hem eche one !
 Lustep, quap Lucifer," &c.

Whitaker's ed. p. 354 ; cf. Wright's text, vol. ii. p. 385, l. 12621.

It should also be noted where each MS. ends ; if it contains the "Creed" (of which MSS. are very scarce) ; and in what manner it is divided into passus, as there seems to be much confusion in this respect.

In order to assist in finding any required passage, the following table of the various methods of divisions into passus is added, with an index to the pages in Wright's text, which will be found useful. In some texts of the Crowley type, the "Introduction" is called Passus I., while Pass. I. is called Pass. II., &c. Wright's "introduction" is also called Passus I. by Whitaker, and so on down to P. IV., which he calls Passus V. After this, the divisions are as follows :

Pass. VI., VII., VIII., (Whit.) are equivalent to Pass. V. (Wright) p. 77.

|------------------------------------|---------|----------------|
| „ IX. | | VI. p. 117. |
| „ X. | | VII. p. 138. |
| „ I. (Do-Wel.) | | VIII. and IX. |
| „ II. (Do-Wel.) | | X. p. 173. |
| „ III. and IV. | | XI. p. 202. |
| „ V. | | XII. p. 228. |
| „ VI. (part of) | | XIII. p. 246. |
| „ VI. (part of) and VII. (part of) | | XIV. p. 273. |
| „ VII. (part of) and I. (Do-bet.) | | XV. p. 294. |
| „ II. (Do-bet.) | | XVI. p. 330. |
| „ III. (Do-bet.) | | XVII. p. 348. |
| „ IV. (Do-bet.) | | XVIII. p. 369. |
| „ I. (Do-best) | | XIX. p. 396. |
| „ II. (Do-best) | | XX. p. 425. |

This is but a general guide ; it should be added that Passus IX. (Whit.) really begins at l. 3798 (Wr.) ; that his P. III. of Do-wel begins at l. 6658, &c. ; but this will not occasion much difficulty.

Since, however, the Passus are often not numbered in the MSS., or else, perhaps, so numbered as not to adhere to the same system throughout, the following list of first lines is added, as likely to be of great use to the reader of a MS. in finding his place. It will be noticed that those of the Vernon type divide the Passus V. of Wright's edition into two Passus, the division occurring so near to the end of that Passus as nearly to bisect Passus VIII. of Whitaker.

Any information with respect to MSS., any illustrative comments, or any quotations which serve to illustrate the use of the more difficult words which occur in any of the texts, will be very thankfully received by the editor, the Rev. W. W. SKEAT, 22, Regent Street, Cambridge.

NOTE.—The order of extracts following is to some extent chronological, but it is impossible to be sure of the right order without comparing the original MSS. all together at once. Those of the Whitaker type, however, have been kept separate for convenience. The Caius MS. agrees very nearly with the early printed editions.

INTRODUCTION.

HAVING more than once been asked the question—"What is Piers Plowman?"—it occurs to me that it will be useful to many readers to have this question answered for them in a few words. Many persons, even scholars and antiquaries, have loosely used the title Piers Plowman as though it were the name of an author, instead of remembering that it is the name or subject of a poem; it would be a mistake exactly similar to this, to attribute the "Pilgrim's Progress" to Christian. But the author's name is Langland, probably William Langland, and the name of his poem is—The Vision of William concerning Piers Plowman, which has been more briefly expressed as—The Vision of Piers Plowman. But this shorter title is most misleading; so few apprehend the fact that the word of in this case is a translation of the Latin de, and not the sign of the genitive case; and the confusion has been made far worse by the circumstance that there is another and distinct poem, by another author, the name of which is "Pierce Ploughman's Crede," or "The Crede of Pierce Ploughman," in which the word "of" is the sign of the genitive case. If the reader will only bear in mind these two uses of the word of, he need never go wrong in this matter. Having thus cleared the way by this preliminary explanation, the whole matter may be briefly stated thus. A poet of the reign of Edward the Third, of whom scarcely anything is known but the name (and even that is uncertain), wrote a poem in alliterative verse which he threw into the form of several successive visions; in one of these he describes his favourite ideal character—Piers¹—and in course of time the name was used as a common title for the whole series of them. His vivid descriptions and earnest language caused the poem to be very popular, and the fertile imagination of the author induced him to rewrite the whole poem twice over, so that what may fairly be called three editions of it still exist in manuscript. The first or earliest of these is given in this volume, and is of great interest.¹ It is the scarcest of the three, and yet sufficiently common; the whole number of MSS. of the poem being very large. The poem—in all its shapes—abounds with passages which we could ill afford to lose; the vivid truthfulness of its delineations of the life and manners of our forefathers has been often praised, and it is difficult to praise it too highly. “Everywhere it gives flesh and blood to its abstractions by the most vigorous directness of familiar detail, so that every truth might, if possible, go home, even by the cold hearth-stone of the hungriest and most desolate of the poor, to whom its words of a wise sympathy might be recited.”² As indicating the true temper and feelings of the English mind in the fourteenth century, it is worth volumes of history; and the student who is desirous of understanding this period aright cannot possibly neglect Langland and Chaucer. Strangely too, and fortunately, these two authors are, in a great measure, each the supplement of the other. Chaucer describes the rich much more fully than the poor, and shews the holiday-making, cheerful, genial phase of English life; but Langland pictures the homely poor in their ill-fed, hard-working condition, battling against hunger, famine, injustice, oppression, and all the stern realities and hardships that tried them as gold is tried in the fire. Chaucer’s satire often raises a good-humoured laugh; but Langland’s is that of a man who is constrained to speak out all the bitter truth, and it is as earnest as is the cry of an injured man who appeals to heaven for vengeance. Each, in his own way, is equally admirable, and worthy to be honoured by all who prize highly the English character and our own dear native land. There is a danger that some who take up “Piers Plow-man" may be at first somewhat repelled by the allegorical form of it, or by an apparent archaism of language,¹ and some passages are sufficiently abstruse to require a little thought and care to be taken before one can seize their full meaning; but there are few books that so thoroughly repay a little painstaking consideration, and, when once the spirit of the poem is fully entered into, it is found to be replete with interest and instruction. The reader who does not throw it aside at first will hardly do so afterwards; and so it must ever be with the works of a true poet, when once the mind is attuned to his thoughts and feelings. Such, then, is "Piers Plowman," a poem written with as intense an earnestness and as untiring a search after truth—which is the ever-recurring burden of it—as any in the English language.

² Professor Morley, English Writers, vol. 1, p. 758; see also p. 775. The reader will also find some most valuable remarks upon Langland’s poem in Dean Milman’s History of Latin Christianity.

The extreme earnestness of the author and the obvious truthfulness and blunt honesty of his character are in themselves attractive and lend a value to all he utters, even when he is evolving a theory or wanders into abstract questions of theological speculation. But we are the more pleased when we perceive, as we very soon do, that he is evidently of a practical turn of mind, and loves best to exercise his shrewd English common sense upon topics of every-day interest. How often does the student of history grow weary of mere accounts of battles and sieges and the long series of plunders and outrages revenged by other plunders and outrages which require to be again revenged in their turn, and so on without end, and long to get an insight into the inner every-day life of the people, their dress, their diet, their wages, their strikes, and all the minor details which picture to us what manner of men they really were! And it is in such a poem as the present that we find all this, and find it, too, not merely hinted at or presupposed, but sketched out vividly and to the life by a master-hand. That this is really the case might be shewn by numberless quotations, but the reader will probably prefer to see a few good instances of it only, that he may be tempted to find out more for himself.

To plunge at once in medias res. Here is the interior of a beer-house in the time of Edward the Third, and a description of the company therein.¹

“Cisse the sutor’s² wife · sat on the bench,
 Wat the warrener · and his wife both,
 Tomkin the tinker · and twain of his knaves,
 Hick the hackney-man · and Hogg the neelder,³ Clarice of Cook’s lane · and the clerk of the church,
 Sir Piers of Pridie · and Pernel of Flanders,
 Daw the ditcher · and a dozen other.
 A ribibour,⁴ a rattoner⁵ · a raker of chepe,⁶
 A roper, a reding-king⁷ · and Rose the disher, Godfrey of Garlickshire · and Griffin the Welsh,
 And of upholders a heap · early by the morrow
 Give the Glutton with good will · good ale to hansel.
 Then Clement the Cobbler · cast off his cloak,
 And at the new fair · he laid it to sell;
 And Hick the ostler · hit⁸ his hood after,
 And bade Bet the butcher · be on his side.
 There were chapmen chosen · the ware to appraise;
 Whoso had the hood · should have [some] amends.
 They rise up rapely⁹ · and rowned¹⁰ together,
Appraising the pennyworths · and parted [them] by themselves.
 There were oaths a heap · whoever them heard!
 They could not, for their conscience · accord to-gether,

In these extracts, I have modernized the spelling, and where words are printed in italics, have slightly altered the language. Words between brackets are inscriptions of my own. With such slight changes how easy the language becomes! The first extract is a passage of unusual difficulty.

⁹ rapidly, in a hurry.

¹⁰ whispered, buzzed.

Till Robin the roper · was red ¹ to arise,
 And named for a numpire · that no debate were.
 Then Hick the ostler · had the cloak,
 In covenant that Clement · should the cup fill
 And have Hick's hood—the ostler's · and hold himself paid ;
 And he that repented rathest ² · should arise thereafter,
 And greet Sir glutton · with a gallon of ale.
 There was laughing and lotering ³ · and ‘let go the cup ;’
 Bargains and beverages · began to arise,
 And [they] sat so till evensong · and sung some while,
 Till Glutton had gulpèd · a gallon and a gill,” &c.—V. 158—191.

Not so unlike modern English common life—these “bargains and beverages,” and the “oaths a heap !”

Mark, on the other hand, how our author praises temperance.

“Eat not, I hote ⁴ thee · till hunger thee take,
 And send thee some of his sauce · to savour thee the better.
 Keep some till supper time · and sit thou not too long ;
 Arise up ere appetite · hath eaten his fill ;
 Let not Sir Surfeit · sit at thy board.
 And if thou diet thee thus · I dare lay both my ears,
 That Physic shall his furred hood · for his food sell,
 And eke his cloak of Calabre · with knobs of gold,
 And be fain, by my faith ! his physie to leave,
 And learn to labour with land · lest livelihood fail.”

VII. 248—259.

That is, if men were only temperate and consented to diet themselves, doctors would have to turn farm-labourers to get a living ! A lesson as valuable as it is true, and men are nearly as far off as ever from learning it.

Or suppose, again, that we would know somewhat as to the diet of the poor. Here is the explicit statement of it.

“‘I have no penny,’ quoth Piers · ‘pullets to buy,
 Neither geese nor grice ⁵ · but two green cheeses,

² soonest.

³ badinage, “chaffing.”

And a few curds and cream · and a therf¹ cake,
 And a loaf of beans and bran · baked for my children.
 And I say, by my soul ! · I have no salt bacon,
 Nor no cokeneys,² by Christ · collops to make.
 But I have porets³ and parsley · and many cole⁴-plants,
 And eke a cow, and a calf · and a cart-mare
 To draw afield the dung · while the drought lasteth.
 By this livelihood must I live · till Lammas time,
 By that, I hope to have · harvest in my croft,
 Then may I dight thy dinner · as thee best liketh.
 All the poor people · peas cods fetched,
 Baked beans in bread · they brought in their laps, Chibolles, chief meat⁵ (?) · and ripe cherries many,
 And proffered Piers this present · therewith to please Hunger.”

VII. 267—282.

This bread made of beans is the same, I suppose, as the horses and dogs ate :—

“ With hounds’ bread and horse-bread · hold up their hearts ! ”

VII. 203.

This was all very palatable when wages were low, but as soon as the poor got higher wages, as they did at harvest time, nothing would serve them but the finest wheat-bread, and the best and brownest ale ; none of your “ half-penny ale ” then, or “ penny ale ” either.

“ Labourers that have no land · to live on but their hands,
 Deign not to dine a-day · [on] a-night-old worts,
 May no penny-ale them please · nor no piece of bacon,
But only fresh flesh · or else fried fish,
 Both “ chaud ” and “ plus-chaud ” · against chilling of their maw !
Except he be highly hired · else will he chide,
 That he was a workman wrought · [he will] warie the time,⁶
 And curse deeply the king · and all his council after,
 Such laws to make · labourers to chasten.”—VII. 295—302.

¹ unleavened.

² lean fowls.

³ a kind of leek.

⁴ cabbage.

⁵ What is “ cheef mete ” ? Another reading is “ kernels,” or else “ chervils ” (Wright), and another “ chest-nuts.” Chibolles are leeks.

⁶ curse the hour.

Langland is peculiarly at home when he adopts a satirical vein, and I select the following among many instances of it. He describes how the king made up his mind to punish Falsehood, Guile, and Liar, if he could possibly catch hold of them, whereon the three delinquents made off as fast as they could, and could meet with no kindly reception but with the friars, the pardoners, and cheating tradesmen. No one else would have anything to do with them !

“Then Falsehood for fear · fled to the friars ;
 And Guile doth him to go ¹ · aghast for to die,
 But merchants met with him · and made him abide,
 Besought him in their shops · to sell their ware,
 Apparelled him as a ‘prentice · the people to serve.
 Lightly Liar · leapt away thence,
 Lurking through lanes · to-lugged ² by many.
 He was nowhere welcome · for his many tales,
 But everywhere hunted · and hote to truss.³
 Pardoners had pity · and put him to house,
 Washed him and wrung him · and wound him in clouts,
 And sent him on Sundays · with seals to churches,
 And [he] gave pardon for pence · pound-mele ⁴ aboute,” &c.

· II. 186—198.

Not that the pardoners were quite allowed to monopolize Liar ; the quack-doctors and grocers wanted to press him into their service just as much.

Still better is the poet’s indignant reproof of the pert boys who think to shew off their cleverness by scoffing at God and His just ways.

“Now is each boy bold · brothels ⁵ and others,
 To talk of the Trinity · to be holden a sire,
 And findeth forth fancies · our faith to impair,
 And eke defameth the Father · that us all made,
 And talks against the clergy · crabbed words.
 ‘Why would God our Saviour · suffer such a worm
 In such a wrong wise · the woman to beguile ?

² lugged about, teased.

³ bidden to pack.

⁴ by whole pounds at a time.

⁵ reprobates.

Both hir husband and she · to hell through him went,
 And their seed for that sin · the same woe suffer ?
 Such motives they move · these masters in their glory,
 And make men misbelieve · that muse on their words."

XI. 61—69.

But to pick out all the interesting passages would be to transcribe half the poem; and I may refer the reader to the Preface following—pp. xxxiii., xxxiv., and xxxviii.—for further remarks on the character of the work and of its author, and to pp. xxxix.—xliii. for an "argument" of the whole of the earliest version. I now merely add one more extract, in quite a different strain, which is especially interesting as indicating the dawn of the Reformation, and which (towards the end) is hardly less distinctly and vigorously put than it would have been by Luther himself.

"Now hath the pope power · pardon to grant,
 For people without penance · to pass into joy.

PREFACE I.

TEXT A.

§ 1. THE MSS. of "Piers Plowman" are indeed numerous. Extracts from twenty-nine have already been exhibited in my tract published for the E. E. T. S. in 1866. Besides these, I have seen or heard of several others, viz. a second MS. at Dublin, two belonging to Lord Ashburnham,¹ one in the library of Lincoln's Inn, two among the Douce MSS. at Oxford (numbered 104 and 323), MS. Ashmol. No. 1468, one in the possession of H. Yates Thompson, Esq., of Liverpool, and a fragment of four leaves only (but of a fair text), in MS. Lansdowne 398, fol. 77.² In MSS. Additional (B. M.), 6399, there is a piece called "Langland, commentary on his Piers Plowman," but it is only a fragment of about three leaves in a modern hand. I feel sure there are yet more in various parts of the country, many probably in private hands, and I should be much obliged for any information concerning them. I have to thank Lord Ashburnham and H. Yates Thompson, Esq., for the kind way in which they have assisted me, by sending me transcripts of the passage printed in the "Extracts," and for further information concerning their MSS.

§ 2. The poem takes no less than five different shapes, but two of these are merely owing to differences of arrangement made by the scribes; and there are really no more than three forms of it. Before discussing these, I shall give to them the following names, for distinct-ness' sake. Those of the first or earliest form I shall speak of as being of Type A, or of the "Vernon" type, because the best example of it is furnished by the Vernon MS. at Oxford; those of the second or next earliest form belong to Type B, or the "Crowley" type, so named because the earliest printed edition was taken from one of these, and was printed by Robert Crowley in 1550;¹ those of the latest form belong to Type C, or the "Whitaker" type, of which only one has ever been printed, viz. by Dr Whitaker, in 1813. It will also be convenient to speak of Text A, Text B, and Text C, meaning by these the texts which I am now editing; thus Text A means the text given in the present volume, the text of the best MS. of the Vernon type. The present preface, for the most part, concerns MSS. of this type only.

¹ One of these seems to have belonged to Dr Adam Clarke; but Dr Clarke had two. Where is the other?

² I think Sir Thos. Phillipps has two other MSS., besides the one from which Whitaker printed his edition.

§ 3. Of this earliest and most interesting form of the poem very little seems to have been hitherto known. The only reference to it in Mr Wright's preface to his edition is where he tells us that "a few readings are added from a second MS. in Trinity College Library (R. 3. 14)," of which more presently; and he speaks of only "two classes" of MSS. But in Warton's Hist. of Engl. Poetry, vol. 2, appendix, p. 482, is the following noteworthy passage. "Among the Harley MSS. there is a fragment of this poem written upon vellum (No. 875),² of an equally early date with Vespasian B. xvi.,³ and in a character nearly resembling it. Unhappily this fragment extends only to the 151st line of the 8th passus, nor is it free from lacunæ even thus far.⁴ Our loss is however in some measure repaired—perhaps wholly so⁵—by the preservation of a transcript on paper, in the same collection (No. 6041), which, though considerably younger, and somewhat modernized in its orthography, exhibits a much more correct⁶

² Described below; see description of MS. No. III.

³ This MS. is very old and very good; but it belongs to Type C; I can find nothing better of its kind, and shall therefore probably use it to form Text C.

⁴ Some leaves are lost; but there are no other lacunæ, except such as it has in common with Harl. 6041 and all the MSS. of the earliest type.

⁶ It is sometimes less correct; as the reader may see for himself.

and intelligible text. From this manuscript it is evident, that another and a third version was once in circulation; and if the first draught of the poem be still in existence, it is here perhaps that we must look for it. For in this, the narrative is considerably shortened, many passages of a decidedly episodic cast—such as the tale of the cat and the ratons, and the character of Wrath—are wholly omitted; others, which in the later versions are given with considerable detail of circumstance, are here but slightly sketched; and though evidently the text-book of Dr Whitaker's and Crowley's versions, it may be said to agree with neither, but to alternate between the ancient and modern printed copies." ¹ The italics are mine, intended to draw attention to the truth and importance of the above note, in which most of the characteristics of the early MSS. are so well hit off. I would add further that (as the reader will soon see), we now know of many more MSS. of this type; that we have abundant evidence of its being really the first and original draught of the poem, that Type B is obviously derived from it almost wholly by amplification and addition, and preserves nearly the same order in the narrative, even where C wanders away from both; and that (which greatly helps the argument) the Latin quotations occurring in A are much fewer than those found in the corresponding parts of B and C, even when all allowance is made for the amplification of the story. More than this, such Latin quotations as do occur in A are nearly all from the Bible, and chiefly from the more familiar parts of it, the Psalms and the Gospels; in the later texts, they have a wider range. It is also to be noted that the oldest and best MS. yet found, the Vernon MS., belongs to the earliest type. But the great feature of MSS. of the A type is this, that they do not extend beyond eleven passus. They contain considerably less than one half, perhaps not much more than a third of the whole poem. As there is, in the case of three of them, an apparent contradiction to this, this point will be best discussed after the MSS. have been fully described; and, to make the matter clear as briefly as possible, I here at once enter on the description of all the MSS. of this class with which I am acquainted.

¹ He means, between Crowley's and Whitaker's copies. To "alternate" is scarcely the right word; it is far closer to the former of these than the latter. Still, it sometimes comes closer to the latter in a few points.

§ 4. DESCRIPTION OF THE MSS.

I. Vernon MS. ; denoted throughout this volume by the letter V, and used to form Text A.¹ Its date is about 1370—1380. This MS. is indeed a noble and an admirable one. Its immense size, and the beauty of the vellum, of the writing, and of the illuminated letters have long since attracted notice, and it has already been made considerable use of by editors, and several extracts from it are in print. It would be a good deed to print it all, and it will receive considerable attention from our Society. It has received the name of “Sowlehele,” as containing things useful for the soul's health ; and the name is a good one : the poems and treatises in it, which are very numerous, being chiefly of a religious cast. On a square slip, pasted inside the cover, are the words, somewhat defaced, “Bibliothecæ Bodleianæ Dono dedit Edvardus Vernon Armiger olim ex col. Trin. in hac universitate Superioris ordinis Commensalis in nupero bello civili a partibus regijs strenue propugnabat Militum tribu[nus].” It contains considerably more than 400 large leaves, each containing two columns, and each column, when written without breaks, contains about 80 lines.² The “Piers Plowman” occupies but a small space in it, beginning at fol. 394 b, col. 2, and ending with fol. 401 b, taking up just 28 columns and a half. The initial letters, denoted in this volume by large capitals, are illuminated in gold and colours. The Passus are not numbered, but are denoted by leaving a blank line above them, and these divisions exactly agree with those of the other MSS. of the same type. The poem is written in long lines, as here printed, and each line is divided into two by a metrical dot, here denoted by an inverted full stop, indicating a pause of the voice, such as is often equivalent to a comma in punctuation, but which must sometimes be disregarded as a punctuating mark, just as we sometimes so disregard a colon in the Prayer-book version of the Psalms. Besides these dots, it has others occasionally inserted, as, for instance, after me in l. 2, after beo-hcold in l. 13, dich (l. 16), feld (l. 17), worthinge (l. 18), &c. These also have reference to the pauses in recitation, and subdivide the half-verses into quarter-verses; but they are introduced so sparingly, upon the whole, that I have omitted them, as only tending to confuse. The word I is always followed by a point, as (I.), and the word and (.and.) has a point both before and after it; these slight peculiarities I have not preserved. In other respects, however, it has been very faithfully followed, its capital letters preserved, and all expansions of contractions marked by the use of italics.¹ The paragraph marks (§) are, in the MS., painted red and blue alternately. Among the illuminated letters we often meet with the thorn-letter (þ), but never a capital þ. This is owing to the illuminator, who has made a capital Y more than once where a small þ can be detected as having been written to tell him what to do.

This MS. was taken for the text, not solely because it is the oldest and best written, but also because a careful collation of it with the rest has shewn that its readings are, on the whole, better than those of any other. It seems to me to be the best known MS. of "Piers Plowman" in every respect. Still, it is not perfect. It is a peculiar difficulty, in writing out alliterative poems, to avoid missing a line. This is easily ascertained by mere practice in transcription, and I have especially noticed that hardly any MS. of "Piers Plowman" is free from this defect. It very frequently happens that the missing lines are most obviously needed to complete the sense. On this account, and also because it is best to shew every line that can be found in the early MSS., lines have been inserted from other MSS. wherever they occur. Only one or two bad ones have been relegated to the foot-notes. The reader will observe how very few of these extra lines there are, after all, and how very closely all the MSS. of

Type A agree together in their general contents, their differences being chiefly verbal. The text has also been emended by help of the other MSS. where it seemed to need it; the amended word being inserted between square brackets, and account of it rendered in the foot-notes. In a very few cases, a word occurring in MS. V has been suppressed in the text, notice being of course given of this in the foot-notes.

The MS. has but one great defect. It is, that a single leaf has been cut out of it with a sharp knife, the extreme inner edge of the leaf being still visible. Most unfortunately, this leaf is the very one which contains the concluding portion of the last Passus; so that we cannot certainly say how it ended. At the same time, it is very evident that it never contained much beyond these eleven Passus, for a leaf can only contain 320 lines at most, and there are about 140 lines lost from the eleventh Passus, which would very nearly fill up the one side of the leaf. But the poem which follows “Piers Plowman” has lost its beginning, so that the contents of this leaf can be nearly accounted for.¹ The abundance of my materials has enabled me to remedy this defect in a great measure, by giving the missing portion of the poem from MS. T, with collations from four others.

II. MS. Harl. 875, denoted in this volume by the letter II; of early date, about 1400.²

This valuable MS. is the one alluded to by Warton. It is of vellum, and consists of 21 leaves only (size, about 10 inches by 6½), with about 40 lines to the page. One leaf, the 17th, is lost, and it is imperfect at the end, terminating at l. 144 of Passus VIII. I greatly doubt if it ever went further than the end of this Passus, as will be shewn presently, in discussing the probable point of termination of the ¹ I have not succeeded in finding out how much of the succeeding poem is lost. It seems to be on the subject of Joseph (of Arimathea?) and is written in alliterative verse; but the verses are run together, so that the folio begins in the middle of a line, thus:

. . . . sire, he seis · and sonenday is nowē;
And þei lenden of þe toun · and leuen hit þere.”

Mr Halliwell's description is here wrong; he calls the piece succeeding “Piers Plowman,” Judas and Pilate; but the beginning of this poem—“Judas was a luper brid”—is on fol. 404 verso. β, not, as he says, on fol. 403 recto. α.

² Numbered 7 in the “Parallel Extracts.”

MSS. of this type. This MS. is, in general, very close to the "Vernon," and pairs off with it better than any other does, as will soon appear by studying the foot-notes. It contains additional lines occasionally, and seems to be the fullest of the series. It is therefore very useful for completing the sense, in passages that seem incomplete. It may be, however, that a few of these extra lines are spurious; at any rate, the two long parentheses, Pass. II. ll. 136—139, and ll. 141—143, are very awkward, and seem peculiar to this MS. It has been collated with the text throughout as far as it goes, and all its important variations of reading will be found in the foot-notes, and the proof-sheets have been compared with the MS.

III. MS. in Trinity College, Cambridge, marked R. 3. 14, denoted in this volume by T; date, near the beginning of the fifteenth century.¹

This is a very remarkable and valuable MS., and has been used to complete the text, at the end of Passus XI. It contains 72 written leaves of vellum, containing about 42 to 46 lines on a page; the size of each page being $11\frac{1}{2}$ by $6\frac{1}{2}$ inches. On the fly-leaf preceding the poem is a coloured drawing, with the motto "God spede þe plouȝ & sende us korne I-now." A copy of this drawing is given, as a frontispiece, in Mr Wright's edition of the poem. The volume contains the whole of "Piers Plowman," but this has only been achieved by fitting on a part of a MS. of Type C to the earlier text. There would be nothing remarkable in this were it not that the same peculiarity occurs in two other MSS.² Hence arises the question—Are the texts A and C merely joined in all three MSS.; or is it that Text A was originally completed by what was afterwards the latter part of Text C? The latter supposition is altogether out of the question, as will be seen in the sequel, and hence we are sure that the texts are joined; and, indeed, on closer inspection, the signs of junction become obvious. The system of division into Passus and of numbering the Passus is not the same in A and C; and this furnishes an easy test; for the former part of this MS. follows the A-text system, the latter the C-text system; and, as a necessary consequence, we find that the numbering of the Passus is all wrong at the point of junction. At this point we find written Passus tercius de douel,¹ and only eighteen lines below comes the title Passus secundus de dobet; ² the next Passus has no title, but the next after that is Passus quartus de douel; after which the numbering is more consistent and regular. The insertion of the title Passus tercius de douel above what is really the mere end of a Passus shews that at this point the junction was made; ³ and it is at this very point that the Douce and Ashmolean MSS. (D and A) break off. The texts are, however, joined exactly at the right place, which was easily done merely by looking for the quotation Brevis oracio penetrat eclum, which forms an excellent catchword. To remove, however, all doubts in the reader's mind, it is proper to add that, though the junction of the two texts has been effected as well perhaps as it could have been effected, there are certain differences of arrangement of the subject-matter in texts A and C, which interfere with the continuousness of the story, so that the patching becomes at once obvious upon comparison. Briefly, external evidence indicates that two quite different texts are here joined, and the internal evidence proves it, as I think, beyond a doubt.

This is the best place to note that this MS. abounds with tags at the end of words, which some would consider as equivalent to a final e. I am not myself of this opinion (at any rate as regards this MS. in particular); but, that they may not be disregarded, I have printed an italic e wherever they occur. Such a spelling as “life” seems, however, inferior to “lif.”

The MS. has been collated with the text down to the point where it is itself used to complete the text. Having had ready access to it at all times, the proof-sheets have been compared with it several times over.

IV. MS. belonging to University College, Oxford, denoted in this volume by U; date, the early part of the fifteenth century.⁴

² Dobet is a mere error for douel; this is consistent then with the scribe's subsequent way of numbering, which differs from that in Dr Whitaker's edition.

³ See description of MS. No. X.

⁴ Numbered 10 in the “Parallel Extracts.”

Besides "Piers Plowman," it contains many pieces in Latin. The English portion comes first, and consists of 31 vellum leaves, followed by 5 on paper; the size of the page is about 8 inches by 6, and each page contains about 33 lines. The 3rd leaf is missing. It is an important and valuable MS., especially from its evident independence of the rest, agreeing sometimes with one and sometimes with another, sometimes even with none, yet corroborating them in the main. It must have been copied from an older and imperfect one, or still more probably, from two others, some of the leaves in which were out of place. Hence some of its text is most absurdly transposed, and takes the following order. From the beginning it is regular down to Passus II. l. 25, which is immediately followed (on the same page) by Passus VII. ll. 71—213, and then returns to l. 182 of Passus I., the last four lines of Passus I. and some twenty lines of Passus II. occurring twice over. It then goes on down to Passus VII. l. 70, when the passage which has already occurred is omitted. The vellum portion is better than the paper, and apparently by an earlier hand, though both are of the earliest type. The paper portion begins with "But honysche hym as an hound & hote hym go þennes" (Passus XI. l. 48), and is of less value, and its readings less to be relied on. Still, it has been collated with the text throughout, and repeatedly compared with the proof-sheets.

V. MS. Harl. 6041; denoted hereafter by the symbol H_2 ; date, scarcely earlier than 1450.¹ This is the MS. to which Warton has drawn attention in the passage above quoted, and his conjecture, that it belongs to the earliest class, is perfectly right. Yet it is but a poor one, compared with the four already mentioned. It is on paper (size, about 9 inches by 6), and the writing is loose and not very careful; mistakes are not unfrequent. On fol. 96 b we find the note, "This boke perteynet to my dAne william holyngborne." Several leaves are partly torn out. It is remarkably close to MS. T; and, hence, after collating it closely with the text from the beginning down to l. 146 of Passus II., I ceased doing so; finding that it is, practically, little else than an inferior duplicate of T, and may be neglected without much loss. Yet it has occasionally been consulted in difficult passages, and readings from it will be found here and there throughout the book. It was especially useful for collation throughout the last portion of Passus XI. It resembles T also in its being a mixture of types A and C; the point of junction is the same, but the only indication of it is that, seventeen lines lower down, there is a marginal note, “primus passus deficit hic,” which, seeing that Passus tercius is in question, is a mark of confusion as well as of deficiency.

VI. MS. Douce 323; denoted hereafter by D. This is in a comparatively late hand (about 1480?), clearly written upon paper, each leaf about 11 inches by 8, with a very wide margin, about 31 lines to the page. Contents. fol. 1—101. A history of England, printed by Wynkyn de Worde, 1515. folio, under the title of “Fructus Temporum.” Begins—“In the noble lande of Surrye;” ends—“withoute eny chalange of eny man. Amen. Deo gracias.” Fol. 102—140 a; “Piers Plowman;” begins—“In A somer sesoun,” &c.; ends—

“Percen with a pater noster þe paleys of heuene
 With-oute penaunce at here partyng in-to heye blysse.
 Now of þis litel book y haue makyd an ende,
 Goddis blessing mote he haue þat drinke wil me sende.
Explicit liber petri plouman.”

Fol. 140 b—159 b. The Abbey of the Holy Ghost, with a drawing of the Abbey on fol. 159 b. Fols. 160—167. Sir Ypotyce, beginning “Alle þat will of wysdom lere;” ending—“And þankeþ god al his wille;” (imperfect?). This MS. follows T rather closely, but is full of gross blunders. On this account, after collating with Passus I.—IV., I desisted, finding that it only tended to choke the foot-notes with inferior readings. But it was useful again for the latter part of Passus XI.

VII. MS. Ashmole 1468; denoted by A. Imperfect, on paper, of no very early date, and has many corrupt readings. It begins at Passus I. l. 142, and ends with the line—“Withoute penauns at here partyng into þe blisse of heuyn. Amen.

Amen. Amen.”

A few Latin quotations are scribbled below, which have occurred in Piers Plowman. Very little use has been made of this, as it seems an inferior MS. ; yet it furnished a few good readings at the end of Passus XI.

The above are the only MSS. of which I have made use ; but there are others of Type A ; viz. the following ones :

VIII. MS. in the library of Lincoln's Inn ; date, about 1450 ? It contains—1. Part of Le Beau Desconus ; 2. Merlin ; 3. Alexander ; 4. Bellum Trojanum ; 5. Piers Plowman, and is incomplete at the beginning and end. See Hunter's "Three Catalogues," p. 399.

The Piers Plowman is contained in 17 leaves, containing about 52 or 53 lines in a page. It is imperfect, and the last page is much defaced, rubbed, and discoloured ; the last words on the page that can be traced are . . . bischopis lettres . . . ; i. e. about 20 lines from the end of Passus VIII., and only some 14 lines beyond the point where H ends ; probably neither of them ever went further than the end of this Passus, i. e. than the end of the Vision of Piers Plowman, properly so called. On comparing a transcript of a considerable number of lines kindly made for me by Mr. Furnivall, I found that the text has been much corrupted by the scribe, and that to collate it would only fill the foot-notes with false readings, except in places where the text is sufficiently ascertained without it. The corruptions are due to an inordinate love of alliteration, so that a new word is often incorrectly put for an old one for the mere sake of getting a fourth word in the line beginning with the rime-letter, contrary to the rules of an alliterative verse, which does not require this, but on the contrary seeks, as a rule, to avoid it.¹ Hence we get such lines as,

"Went wyde into pis worlde wondres to wayte," (l. 4) ;

"Vndur a brod banke by a borne brymme," (l. 8) ;

"I sagh a tour on a tofte treowliche ytymbred," (l. 14).

The scribe has made yet one more mistake ; he sometimes separates the line into two half-lines, each alliterative in itself ; as,

"In abite as an hermyte, vn-worthy of werkes," (l. 3).

"For to seche seynt Iame & verrykes² at rome, (l. 47).

¹ Of course, some lines of this form are genuine ; and notably l. 1, in which nearly all the MSS. of all types agree.

² Sic ; an error for relyks.

Careful examination of the MS. shews, in fact, that it is best dismissed.

There are yet two more MSS., which though not strictly agreeing with those of the earliest type, are yet mere modifications of it; they are a little amplified, yet much less full than Text B. I also consider them here, because but little further use will be made of them.

IX. MS. Harl. 3954; date about 1420.¹ The “Piers Plowman” extends from fol. 92 to fol. 123 b. The MS. is on vellum; and the pages are of a peculiar shape, about 11 inches long by a little less than 6 inches wide; each page contains about 40 lines. It has some very peculiar spellings, as qwat for what, and xal for shall, which are marks of an East-Midland dialect. At the beginning, it follows Type B, giving a long prologue which contains the “story of the rats,” but it omits many passages which occur in such MSS., and, towards the end, approaches Type A. I do not consider it of much value, and believe it to be frequently corrupted. The concluding lines are noteworthy, and illustrate the above remark. They should be compared with the concluding lines in this volume.

Ben non rathere I-rauysched fro the ryth beleue þan arn þese grete clerkys þat know many bokys;
 Ben non sonere I-sauyd, non saddere of conceyens þan pore puple as plowmeñ, & pasturers of bestys, Sawerys & sowerys & sweche leude Iottys;
 For þei leuyn as þei be leryd, & oper-wyse nouth,
 Musyn in no materes but holdyn þe ryth be-leue.

Explicit tractus de perys plowman, q. herū² (i); Qui eum patre & spiritu sancto uiuit et regnat per omnia secula seculorum. Amen.

These lines are a sad jumble, and the “praying for pers þe plowmans soule” is particularly out of place, as Piers is not the author of the poem, but the subject of it ; and it is clear that the author had always in his mind the resemblance of his Piers Plowman to Christ. This is shewn, curiously enough, by the Latin colophon, where the Qui certainly refers to perry's plowman, and as certainly means Christ himself and no other. This MS. may be now dismissed without more words.

² i. e. “quothe herun,” I suppose, intimating that Herun was the scribe’s name.

X. MS. Digby 145 ; late 15th century, on paper.¹ This is but a poor copy, and is a mixture of texts. The early part of it is, like the last one, an amplification of Text A ; the latter part follows Text C. The junction is effected, as in MSS. III. and V., at the quotation Breris oracio penetrat celum ; and it is worth noting how the preceding line has been altered about, shewing the scribe's difficulty. This line runs, but is “cooked” in four ways. It has “&” prefixed to it in the margin ; it has “passyn” written over it at the mark * ; it is followed by “Amen” with a stroke through it ; and also by “P. III. de (!) dowell” partly erased, the dowell alone being distinctly legible. I have made no use of this MS. and do not think it worth much attention.

“ without penance at her partyng * into hye blisse,”

§ 5. DISCUSSION OF THE EXTENT OF THE EARLY MSS.

It will now be readily apparent what strong grounds we have for supposing that the early draught of the poem contained no more than eleven Passus. For of these 10 MSS., none go any further ;² although an attempt has been made in three of them, Nos. III., V., and X., to supplement them by help of MSS. of Type C ; which attempt, however, failed in two respects, viz. through the difficulty of reconciling the two ways of numbering the Passus, and the difficulty of making the story continuous, owing to the different ways in which the subject-matter is arranged in the two types. But one point of great importance must now be noticed. The whole poem is called “Piers Plowman” only by a certain latitude of phrase, and the Passus have been in this volume numbered from I. to XI. merely as a matter of convenience. Strictly speaking, this is incorrect. There are really two poems, each perfectly distinct from the other, with different titles, and separate prologues. The first has for its true title, “The Vision of William concerning Piers the Plowman;” the second is—“Vita de Do-wel, Do-bet, et Do-best.”¹ Each poem is complete in itself, and the concluding passages of each are wrought with peculiar care with a view to giving them such completeness, by stating, at the end of each, the result which in each case the author wished to bring out strongly. The only connection between them is that the second is a sort of continuation of the first, and supposes that the dreamer, not being wholly satisfied with the first result of his inquiries, sets out once more to renew and extend them. It is a mark of the later forms of the poems that the distinction between them is less heeded, as though the author had accepted the necessity of their being written and considered as one. This is very clearly shewn by the titles of the different Passus in the A-type MSS. In none of them is there any title to the Prologue to the first poem, but the succeeding Passus are numbered from I. to VIII. in MSS. T, H, U, H₂, and D, except where a title is occasionally lost, or where (once only in H) it is miswritten. But the Prologue to “Dowel, &c.” has the following titles :

² With one remarkable exception, discussed in § 7.

Incipit hic dowel . dobet . and dobest V ;

Explicit hic visio willelmi de Petro de Plouzman : Eciam incipit vita de do-wel do-bet et do-best, secundum wyt et resoun T ;

Explicit hic visio willelmi de petro plowman, Et hic incipit dowel dobet et dobest secundum wit et resoun U ;

Explicit hic visio willelmi de petro the plouzman ; Eciam incipit uita de dowel and dobest, secundum wit et reson H₂ ;

Vita de Dowel Dobet and Dobest secundum wyt and resoun D.

The last two Passus are called Passus primus (and secundus) de dowel, &c., in T and H₂, and the same in U, omitting the &c. In D the former of them has the very significant title, Primus passus in secundo libro.

Hence it appears that there is here no thought of reckoning in the Passus of Dowel as being any part of Piers Plowman, as was afterwards done in MSS. of the later types, especially in the one printed by Mr Wright, where we find such titles as Passus Decimus de Visione, et Secundus de Dowel, and the like.¹ It follows that the numbering of the last three Passus in this volume as IX., X., and XI. is quite incorrect in theory, but of course the advantages of it in practice (especially in constructing a glossarial index) are so obvious as to outweigh all other considerations.

§ 6. Two points then are established: (1.) that our MSS. of this type have but eleven Passus, and (2.) that the first eight of these, with their prologue, belong to Piers Plowman, the last three to the Vita de Dowel. It should further be noted that the exact point of termination is clearly indicated by the Douce and Ashmolean MSS., and by MS. Harl. 3954, and there is every probability that the Vernon MS. terminated here also. But the Lincoln's Inn MS. and Harl. 875 do not go nearly so far, and it is a significant circumstance that they just stop short of the end of "Piers Plowman," properly so called. Considering this, and remembering how often MSS. have just their last leaf wanting, I think it exceedingly likely that they never contained the "Vita de Dowel" at any time; another slight indication of the real distinctness of the two poems.

§ 7. But there is one strange exception. Perhaps the reader may have noticed how careful I have been to say nothing as to where the University College MS. (U, No. IV.) terminates. This is because any previous mention of it would have tended greatly to confusion. If the reader will turn to the end of the "Critical Notes," he will see 18 lines printed in extenso which form the beginning of a "Passus tercius de dowel," and continue the poem beyond the last line of the other texts. These 18 lines are a puzzle; as far as I can ascertain, they are unique, and resemble nothing in any other MS. whatsoever.² They do not agree with either Text B or C. What then can be made of them? I can only offer the suggestion, either that they were added by some person not the author of the poem (though they are very much in his manner), who attempted a continuation of it ; or else that the author himself began a continuation which he afterwards abandoned, betaking himself first to an expansion of the part already written, and afterwards adding thereto a continuation different to the one he at first contemplated. The latter supposition seems to me very probable ; especially as there must have been a little more of this Passus, and yet not much more. The MS. has here lost two leaves, or four pages, so that the utmost that is lost is probably not more than 112 lines, as there are 28 lines to the page. Supposing we were to add 112 to 19, we should get 131 lines, a fair average length for a Passus, thus giving three Passus to “Dowel” instead of two. And some of these lines may have been used again.

§ 8. METHOD OF PRINTING THE TEXT.

This has been already in a great measure explained in describing the Vernon MS. ; see § 4. I. The text is mainly from that MS., but has additional lines and emendations inserted between square brackets. The concluding portion of the last Passus is from MS. T ; see § 4. III. On a careful consideration of Mr Wright’s arguments for printing the poem in short or half-lines, I am not convinced by them. There is no MS. authority for any such practice, all early English alliterative poems (at any rate after the time of Edward II.) being written in long lines invariably. Certainly, the metre was imitated from the Anglo-Saxon poems of Beowulf and Cædmon, and those were written in short lines ; but it is a question of chronology, and to recur to the Anglo-Saxon method is an anachronism. For the same reason, the arrangement of the lines in Layamon has little to do with it, as that belongs to the reign of Richard I. or John. The argument that the use of the dots in the middle of the lines by the scribes is a clear indication that each line was really made up of two, quite falls through on examination. For the scribes were very careless about the insertion of these dots, and MSS. of “Piers Plowman” in which they are preserved throughout are rare, but those in which they are wholly neglected very numerous. In the 10 MSS. above described, the metrical point is carefully preserved in only one, viz. the Vernon ; and it is some proof of the value of MS. T that it is often preserved throughout whole pages, though in other pages it does not appear. In none of the rest does it appear at all, save very rarely. The Latin verses which appear in the prologue of Text B are not in short rimed lines, but are long lines, or Leonine verses, i. e. hexameters and pentameters, and should be printed,

Sum rex, sum princeps, neutrum fortasse deinceps, &c.

But the discussion of which way is the more correct is not very material; the practical question is, which is the more convenient. Mr Wright did well in adopting the method that suited his purpose best, and for a like reason I have adopted the system of printing in long lines, viz. because it renders the poem uniform with the “Early English Alliterative Poems” and the “Morte Arthur.” At the same time, I by all means advocate the retention of the metrical dot, as greatly helping the reader to perceive the rhythm; which was, after all, the real reason for its use.

The lines of each Passus are numbered separately; the great convenience of this will appear hereafter, when the different texts come to be compared. But I have not reckoned in the Latin quotations as counting for lines, except where they are designedly thrown into the shape of alliterative verses. For these quotations are sometimes written in the margin of a MS., or are merely indicated by their first few words, added at the beginning or ending of a line; and a modern poet would print them as foot-notes. If reference to them is to be made, they may be indicated by the number of the line preceding them. When they are not reckoned in, this is pointed out by their being “set back.” For the punctuation of the text I am, of course, responsible.

§ 9. METHOD OF PRINTING THE FOOT-NOTES.

The MSS. T, H, and U have been collated throughout as far as they go. MS. D has been collated throughout the Prologue, Pass. I.—IV., and part of Pass. VI. and Pass. XI.; MS. H₂ from the beginning to Pass. II. l. 146 (with occasional references to it throughout the poem), and throughout Passus IX., X., and XI. The Ashmolean MS. furnished a couple of good readings in Pass. XI. The foot-notes will be very readily understood; they exhibit in general the variations of the other MSS. from the text. Thus the foot-note at l. 20 of the Prologue—and pleiden hem] pleizede TUD. hem ful] but H.—simply shews the substitution in TUD of the one word pleizede for the three words of the text; and that, in H, the last part of the line is of the form “and pleiden but seldene,” though not perhaps with exactly that spelling. In quoting from TUD at once, I mean that the spelling of the MS. first mentioned (in this case MS. T) is given, and that U and D differ from it but very slightly. The real readings are—pleizede T; pleiden U; pleyed D. To have given all such variations of spelling would have been impossible, and would have caused more trouble and expense than printing all these texts at full length. But I have endeavoured to give all useful information by noting down the various spellings of unusual or noteworthy words, even when the differences are but slight; thus, at l. 40 will be found the various spellings of eoden = went; at l. 52 those of lobres = lubbers or loobies, though even here I did not consider it worth while to note that MS. U uses a y for an i, and spells the word lobyes. Again, a good deal of space has been saved by not noticing the use of ac for but, and vice versâ; these words are used indiscriminately as equivalent ones in several of the MSS. A few other slight variations of a similar kind have been left unnoticed. Where a reading is obviously absurd, the mark (!) has been appended to it; and some few absurd readings in the Douce MS. have been passed over with the sole remark, “D is corrupt.” The expansions of contractions are generally marked by italics; but in a few common words this has not been done. The metrical dots are inserted in the lines quoted at length in the notes, for the reader’s convenience; they do not, in general, occur in the MSS. It will sometimes happen that the reader, if he tries (by help of the foot-notes) to reproduce the line as it stands in any given MS., as e. g. in MS. T, will find that he produces a line which is obviously absurd. But I cannot help that; the scribe of MS. T ought to have known better, but he did not. The object, throughout, has been to crowd into the foot-notes as much information as possible, so that the amount of additional information which might be gained from a perusal of the MSS. themselves should be the smallest possible, and that they may be found to be well represented in print as far as need be. From a conviction that all such information, if not accurately rendered, is simply valueless, great care has been taken in revising the proof-sheets, which are, I hope, free from material faults.

§ 10. A FEW WORDS ON ALLITERATIVE VERSE:

I hope to give, in a later volume, a tolerably full account of alliterative verse. Meanwhile, I would refer the reader to my note on the metre of “Morte Arthure,” prefixed to Mr Perry’s edition of that poem, for a brief account of it. It is a metre in which the number of actual syllables is not much regarded, but where all depends on the occurrence of four (or sometimes five) strongly accented syllables in each line. Of these, two should be in the second section of the verse, and two (or three) in the first. The strongest accent should generally fall on the first strongly-accented syllable in the second section, and the initial letter of that syllable is called the rime-letter, and the strongly-accented syllables of the first section should begin with the same letter, or be alliterated with it. It is a metre peculiarly fitted for recitation, and addressed, almost more than any other, to the ear, and one the swing of which is very easily caught. Believing that a plain and easily-understood example of it in modern language is really a better guide to it than precise rules, I quote the following, pointed after the same manner as in “Piers Plowman.”

“Lightly down-leaping · he loosens his helmet ;
 Lightly down-leaping · he lappeth the cool wave :
 He feels that his forces · wax faint, as he drinketh ;
 He slumbers and sleeps · as he sinks on the boulders.
 He rests on his rock-bed · naught recking, for ages ;
 His head, with his hoar locks · still heaves with its breathing.
 When flameth and flasheth · the flare of the lightning,
 When rustle the rain-drops · and rolleth the thunder,
 Lo ! Harold the hero · still handles his sword-hilt,
 Seeking to seize it · tho’ sunk in his slumber.”¹

Any one who can perceive the rhythm of these lines (and it is not

¹ See “Songs and Ballads of Umland,” by the Rev. W. W. Skeat, p. 304. I quote this literally faute de mieux, not knowing where else to find an example ; and I quote very easy to miss it), has a key to a right scansion of Piers Plowman; it being remembered that in this poem also, as in Chaucer, many final e's, &c., must be pronounced fully; which a modern reader is very apt to overlook. The first line is, e. g.

In a somer sesun · whon softe was þe sonnè, where sonnè is a dissyllable. Yet even if this be disregarded, and the language partly modernized, the first four lines of the poem remain very fair lines still, and have a distinct and obvious melody in them; as thus—

In a summer season · when soft was the sun,
I shop me into a shroud · a sheep¹ as I were,
In habit of an hermit · unholy of works,
Went I wide in this world · wonders to hear.

§ II. DATE OF THE POEM.

We are indebted to Tyrwhitt for having pointed out that the "Southwestern wind on a Saturday at even" mentioned near the beginning of Passus V. refers to the storm of wind which occurred on Jan. 15, 1362, which day was a Saturday.² There may have been more than one Saturday marked by a furious tempest, but the remark is rendered almost certainly true by observing that other indications in the poem point nearly to the same date, especially the allusion to the treaty of Bretigny in 1360, and to Edward's wars in Normandy;³ as also the mention of the "pestilence," no doubt that of 1361.⁴ These things put together leave no doubt that Tyrwhitt is right, and as the "wind" is spoken of as being something very recent, the true only these lines, because the preceding ones are, some of them, less regular. I believe that this rhythm, in the hands of a poet of true genius, might be found capable of great things, and far more worthy of cultivation than are "barbarous hexameters."

² "A. D. M.CCC.LXII.—xv die Januarii, circa horam vespertarum, ventus vehemens notus Australis Africus tantâ rabie erapit, &c.;" quoted by Tyrwhitt (in a note to the Advertisement of his Glossary to Chaucer), from the Continuator of Adam Murimuth, p. 115; Cf. P. Pl., Pass. V. l. 14.

³ Pass. III. 182; see Fabian's Chronicles, p. 470.

⁴ Pass. V. 13. There were three great pestilences, in 1348, 1361-2, and 1369; clearly, the second one is meant.

date of the poem is doubtless 1362. But how much was then written? Not all certainly, possibly only the Vision of Piers Plowman, i. e. only the first eight Passus. The first few lines of the Vita de Dowel seem to imply that there was a short interval between the two poems, i. e. if we take them literally, and I can see no reason why we should not. This would assign the early part of 1362 as the date of the former poem, and the end of the same year or the beginning of 1363 as the date of Dowel. In all probability, the expansion of the poem into the form it assumes in Text B was not immediately begun, and it would necessarily take some time and deliberation to render it nearly three times as long as at first, and to multiply the number of Latin quotations by seven. The latter fact, in particular, implies some considerable time spent in study. Now such a consideration as this seems to me altogether to remove a chronological difficulty which has hitherto been a puzzle. It is, that the mention of John Chichester as mayor of London¹ contradicts the date 1362, inasmuch as he was not mayor till the year 1369. But observe, that this mention of him does not occur in any MS. of the A-type, so that the contradiction ceases to exist if we suppose the later Passus of the second version of the poem not to have been composed till after 1370;² perhaps, indeed, not till 1375 or 1376, if we observe that ¹ Fabyan says John Chichester, goldsmith, was sheriff of London in 1358-9, and mayor in 1368-9.

² Our author seems to be a year wrong; he says,

“A thousand and thre hundred ·twies thretty and ten.”

MS. Laud 581. Pass. XIII. (Text B.)

Nearly all other MSS. read “twies twenty and ten;” which is not alliterative. I do not see why Mr Wright is so dissatisfied with this date, and assumes Stowe to be wrong because, in his Survey of London, p. 159, he has the passage—“Moreover, in the 44. of Edward the third, John Chichester being maior of London, I read in the Visions of Pierce Plowman, a book so called, as followeth. There was a careful commune when no cart came to towne with baked bread from Stratford: tho gan beggers weepe, and workemen were agast, a little this will be thought long in the date of our Drite, in a dric Averell, a thousand and three hundred twise thirtie and ten, &c.” He thinks Stowe may have altered the date, because the “drye Aprill” must mean the drought of 1351 mentioned by Fabyan, and that Chichester may have been mayor more than once. But the same Fabyan gives a list of mayors, and makes Chichester mayor once only, in 1368-9. I think it more likely that there were two “dry Aprils.” Stowe does not stand alone in his reckoning. Bale gives the date 1369; so does Wood (Hist. and Antiq. Univ. Oxon. i. ii. p.

the language used in referring to this circumstance is such as we should use in speaking of a thing that happened five or six years ago rather than recently. To this supposition I can see no objection; and I therefore propose the theory that we should refer the first 8 Passus of Text A to the early part of 1362; the Vita de Dowel, in its short and original form, to the end of 1362 or the beginning of 1363; and the revision of the whole poem, and expansion of it into its second shape, to about 1376.¹ The second revision of it, and its alteration into the third form, may have been four or five years later still. It seems to be in the natural order of things that a poem, originally struck off in perhaps no long time, should afterwards have been elaborated with much care and diligence when its popularity was well established. That most of the additional matter in both the later forms of the poem was by Langland himself I have little doubt; his style is very peculiar, and many of the subsequently interpolated passages are the very best of the whole. It is easy to say that others may have added to it; but the question is, who could have done so? There were not two Langlands, surely; and though there are other (anonymous) alliterative poems of considerable merit, such as, for instance, "William of Palerne,"² I greatly doubt if they reach the high standard of poetical power which is conspicuous in Piers Plowman. Conspicuous, that is, after some study; for his phraseology is, at first, difficult to follow, and there are some words which are very unfamiliar to all but those who are fairly well versed in the language of the period; and hence it has come to pass, as it would seem, that though this poem has often been very highly praised—more praised, perhaps, than read—the author has still had but scanty justice done to him. At a first perusal, the poem, though often striking, seems rather heavy, upon the whole, and somewhat wearisome ; but when some insight is gained into it, it becomes more pleasing and attractive, and its power and truth become more apparent. The astonishing vigour and force of the language begins to dawn upon one, and a greater familiarity with it continually increases our admiration. Continual re-perusal of it proves a constant source of pleasure and of profit, and it is not too much to say that when we speak of the great poets of England, of Chaucer, Spenser, Shakespeare, and Milton, there are few who better deserve to be named together with these than one whose very name we scarcely know, the author of “The Vision of Piers Plowman”—WILLIAM LANGLAND.

107); and so does Buchanan (De Scriptoribus Scotis. MS. Bibl. Univ. Edin.). Mr Wright's difficulty arose from supposing that the poem was written all at once; whereas Langland almost expressly states the contrary (Text B. xiii. 3).

² Otherwise called, "William and the Werwolf," but it is only a translation of Guillaume de Palerne. The poem on the "Deposition of Richard II." (Wright's Political Poems, vol. i. p. 368) is the only one in Langland's style.

§ 12. THE AUTHOR'S NAME AND LIFE.

I have just spoken of the author's name as being probably William Langland. That his surname was Langland, Langelande, Langlond, or Longland (it is spelt all ways) seems to be generally agreed. His Christian name has been given as John, Robert, and William. The first of these seems to have been a mere guess of Stowe's (Ann. p. 238), who speaks of John Malverne, Fellow of Oriel College, in Oxford, as having “made and finished his book, entitled, the Visions of Peers Plowman,” in 1342 ; where, besides assigning an obviously wrong date, he seems to attribute the book to the wrong author. Bale has the following passage, containing all that is known of the author's life. “Robertus Langelande, sacerdos, ut apparet,¹ natus in comitatu Salopiæ, in villa vulgò dicta Mortymers Clibery, in terra lutea, octavo à Malvern's montibus milliario fuit. Num tamen eo in loco, incondito et ægresti, in bonis litteris ad maturam ætatem usque informatus fuit, certò adfirmare non possum. Ut neque, an Oxonij aut Cantabrigiæ illis insudaverit ; quum apud eorum locorum magistros, studia præcipuè vigerent. Illud veruntamen liquidò constat, eum fuisse ex primis Joannis Wiclevi discipulis unum, atque in spiritus fervore, contra apertas papistarum blasphemias adversus Deum et ejus Christum, sub anœnis coloribus et typis edidisse in sermone Anglico pium opus, ac bonorum virorum lectione dignum, quod vocabat Visionem Petri Aratoris, lib. 1. In aestivo tempore cum sol caleret.¹ Nihil aliud ab ipso editum novi. In hoc opere condito, præter similitudines varias et jucundas, propheticè plura prædixit,² quæ nostris diebus impleri vidimus. Complevit suum opus anno domini 1369, dum Joannes Cicestrius Londini prætor esset.” Balei, Script. Illustr. majoris Britannie. Cent. vi. p. 474. Basileæ, apud Oporinum, 1559.

Meagre, indeed, is this account, and obviously gleaned, for the most part, from the poem itself. The same information is repeated in a piece of writing inside the cover of Lord Ashburnham's MS. cxxx. “Robertus Langlande, natus in comitatu Salopie in villa Mortimers Clybery in the Clayland and within viij miles of Malvern hills, scripsit piers ploughman, li. 1. In somer season, &c.” This is in the handwriting of John Bale, and is no new testimony. David Buchanan also calls him “Robertus Langland,” but claims him as a Scotchman, and a Benedictine monk of Aberdeen, which is out of the question.³ For all this, I prefer to suppose that his name was really William. Bale's testimony only takes us back to the sixteenth century, but Sir F. Madden found a note in a hand of the fifteenth century in one of the Dublin MSS. to this effect,—“Memorandum, quod Stacy de Rokayle, pater Willielmi de Langland, qui Stacius fuit generosus, et morabatur in Schiptone under Whiewode,⁴ teneus domini le Spenser in comitatu Oxon., qui predictus Willielmus fecit librum qui vocatur Perys Ploughman.” Still more to the purpose are the numerous titles found in the MSS. themselves, where the name Willielmus or Willielmus occurs again and again,⁵ in MSS. of every class. Tyrwhitt notes this in the case of MS. Vesp. B xvi., and quotes the line (verse 5 of Pass. 2), “And sayde, Wille, slepest thou,” &c., where other MSS. have “sone.”⁶ But I would rely yet more on l. 118 of Pass. IX.,

⁶ See Pass. I. l. 5; cf. VIII. 43.

The phrase “oure Wille” is exactly the colloquial way of speaking of a friend or relation which may be heard any day in Shropshire still, as I can well testify, having been called “our Wat” many a time in former days; and it seems to me so utterly unlikely that a man would use a feigned name whilst he was speaking of himself in so familiar a manner. Hence the balance of evidence seems to me in favour of the name William Langland, and we may perhaps further accept the probability that he was born at Cleobury Mortimer, in Shropshire, whilst it is certain that he was familiar enough with Malvern hills, and that he composed the first part of his poem there.¹ He probably afterwards resided a time in London, as he states in the opening lines of Passus VI. (Text C), and was there perhaps “when Chichester was mayor.” It is an open question whether he was a monk and unmarried, or whether his wife Kitte and his daughter Calote² were real personages. The latter supposition seems to me so very much the more natural that I do not see why it should not be adopted. I can see no reason why we should think that the author is always trying to deceive us about himself; and certainly, Langland is the last man one would suspect of not speaking everything straight out. The opening passage of Passus VI. (Text C)³ contains many hints which we need not suppose untrue. He has been supposed a monk because of his learning, but his own simple account seems only to mean that he was well educated, probably in a monastery.

“When i yong was, quod I · many 3er hemes,
 Mi fader and my frendes · founden me to scole
 Til i wiste withturli · what holi writ bi-menede
 And what is best for þe bodi · as þe bok telleþ,”⁴ &c.

In the same passage he calls himself a clerk, though he has only just mentioned Kitte his wife, so that clerk here means no more than a scholar. In another passage he seems to speak of himself as being 45 years old,

“I have folwed thee, in feith !

This fyve and fourty wynter,” (ed. Wright, p. 228).

³ Quoted in Wright's ed. vol. ii. p. 514.

but the requirements of alliteration are such that no stress can be laid upon this. If true, it would go far to shew that some time probably elapsed before he shaped Text A into Text B. It is in itself quite probable; for, if he wrote the “story of the rattons” in 1376¹ (which seems extremely probable from the very significant quotation “Ve terre ubi puer rex est”), and was then forty-five years old, the date of his birth would be 1331, and he would have been 31 years old when first undertaking his poem, a by no means unlikely age. The poem on the “Deposition of Richard II.” was written, of course, in 1399, when he would be 68 according to this theory, if still alive. This poem, in the only MS. in which it occurs, follows “Piers Plowman,” and is written as a sort of continuation of it. Its author must have been extremely familiar with the “Vision,” as he has many half-lines in common with it, and at least one line is quoted from it without alteration, viz.

“Tho ben men of this molde • that most harm worchen.”

(Wright, Pol. Poems, i. 408.)²

And there are many others where the alteration is very slight, as in “Tronthe hathe determyned • the tente to the ende” (id. p. 385).³

To point out all the many points of resemblance between these poems would take up too much space, but we may safely conclude either that the later one was written by some one exceeding familiar with the “Vision” from constant perusal of it, or else by Langland himself at an advanced age. That it was written by an old man seems to be hinted at plainly enough in the lines,

“For it fallith as well • to ffordis [lads] of xxiiij ȝeris,

Or yonge men of yistirday • to ȝeue good redis,

As becometh a kow • to hoppe in a cage!”

(Pol. Poems, i. 405.)

And even were Langland as old as 68 years, this is not equal to the feat performed by Gower, who finished his “Confessio Amantis” in 1393, when he seems to have been upwards of 70, and who had written French ballads in 1350, full 43 years before.⁴ Nor does it appear that Chaucer even began his Canterbury Tales till he was upwards of 60. It is worth noting that the poem now under consideration terminates abruptly, either because (as Mr Wright suggests) the scribe did not partake in the political sentiments of the author, as seems indicated by a marginal note, or because he discovered that it did not form a part of Piers Ploughman. It should be observed, however, that its Passus are numbered from one to four, so that the latter supposition is hardly tenable, and we are quite as much at liberty to suppose that it was never finished. Lastly, if Langland was really the author of this poem, his death probably took place in the very beginning of the reign of Henry IV.

Scanty indeed are these notes of his life ; but the loss of information about him is, after all, of little moment. His poem is a true autobiography in the highest sense of the word. It abounds with his opinions, political and religious, from end to end, all expressed in the most decided language and evidently the result of much thought. The allusions to his poverty and the care taken with his education are certainly true ; and while he satirizes the friars, he seems not much more friendly to the monks. On two points he is especially clear, viz. on the duty of every man to use his own common sense, and on the simplicity which should characterize a plain Christian man's religion. Better, he says, to do well than to have a whole sackful of pardons, which are but unsafe things to trust to. The law of Love is, with him, the one thing most worthy, the only thing in theology worth knowing. But for the Love which theology enjoins, the study of it would be worthless indeed. He shews himself to us as a man of simple, noble, and pure faith, strong in saving common sense, full of love for his fellows, the friend of the poor, the adviser of the rich, with strong views on the duties of a king towards his subjects, together with a feeling of deep reverence for the kingly character, fearless, unprejudiced, and ever willing to be taught. He does not write to please, but to express earnest and deep convictions, and from a love of contemplating the great problem of life ; and there is much that may teach a reader to be earnest, pure, loving, and simple-minded, much that may profit all such as care to be instructed in such things. One point especially deserves attention, the purity of his writings, the great freedom they exhibit from all that is of a prurient tendency. Sometimes, indeed, he speaks out in plain terms, once or twice, but not often, in words that to us are coarse ; but it is invariably in a tone of reproof or indignation. In his character of the glutton, he does not scruple to excite our disgust and loathing, but it is in order to shew how debasing and detestable a thing gluttony really is. This passage and one other near the end of the poem are the only ones which Dr Whitaker, who was somewhat scrupulous, thought it at all necessary to omit ; and I think that the way in which the poet so frequently insists on the sanctity of the marriage-tie, and on the evil of ill-advised marriages, is greatly against the supposition that he was himself unmarried. To sum up all, his life and thoughts can be easily learnt from his poem, and they seem well worth the learning.

§ 13. ARGUMENT OF THE POEM. (TEXT A.)

The poem is distinctly divisible into two parts, the “Vision of Piers Plowman,” and “Vita de Dowel.” Of these, the first is again divisible into two distinct visions, which may be called: (1.) The Vision of the field full of folk, of Holy Church, and of Lady Meed, occupying the Prologue and Passus I.—IV. ; and (2.) The Vision of the Deadly Sins and of “Pers the Ploughmon,”¹ occupying Passus V.—VIII. The remaining Passus (IX.—XI.) form the Prologue and Passus of the “Vita de Dowel.”

I. VISION OF THE FIELD FULL OF FOLK, OF HOLY CHURCH, AND OF LADY MEED. In the PROLOGUE, the author describes how, weary of wandering, he sits down to rest upon the Malvern Hills, and there falls asleep and dreams. In his vision, the world and its people are represented to him by a field full of folk, busily engaged in their avocations. The field was situate between the tower of Truth, who is God the Father, and the dungeon which is the abode of the evil spirits. In it there were ploughmen and spendthrifts, hermits, minstrels, beggars, pilgrims, friars, a pardoner with bulls, law-sergeants, bishops, and all kinds of craftsmen.

Passus I. Presently, he sees a lovely lady, of whom he asks the meaning of the tower. She tells him it is the abode of the Creator, who provides men with the necessities of life. The dungeon is the castle of Care, where lives the Father of Falseness. He next asks her name, and she says she is Holy Church, and instructs him how great a treasure Truth is, how Lucifer fell through Pride, and that the way to heaven lies through Love.

Passus II. He asks how he may know Falsehood. She bids him turn and see Falsehood and Flattery. Looking aside he sees, not them alone, but a woman in glorious apparel. He is told she is the Lady Meed (i.e. Bribery) who is going to be married to Falsehood on the morrow. Holy Church then leaves him. The wedding is prepared, and Simony and Civil read a deed respecting the property with which Falsehood and Meed are to be endowed. Theology objects to the marriage, and disputes its legality; whereupon it is agreed that all must go to Westminster to have the question decided. Thus all come to the King's court, who vows that he will punish Falsehood if he can catch him. On hearing this, Falsehood flees to the friars, who pity him and house him for their own purposes.

Passus III. Lady Meed is arrested and brought before the king. A justice assures her all will go well. To seem righteous, she confesses and is shriven, offering to glaze a church-window by way of amendment; and, immediately afterwards, advises mayors and judges to take bribes. The king proposes she shall marry Conscience, and she is willing to do so; but Conscience refuses, and exposes her faults. She attempts to retaliate and to justify herself; but Conscience refutes her arguments, quotes the example of Saul to shew the evil of covetousness, and declares that Reason will one day reign upon earth, and punish all wrongdoers.

Pass. IV. Acting upon this hint, the king orders Reason to be sent for; who comes, accompanied by Wit and Wisdom. At this moment, Peace enters, with a complaint against Wrong. Wrong, knowing the complaint is true, gets Wisdom and Wit on his side by Meed's help, and offers to buy Peace off with a present. Reason, however, is firm and will shew no pity, but advises the king to act with strict justice. The king is convinced, and prays Reason to remain with him for ever after.

II. THE VISION OF THE DEADLY SINS, AND OF PIERS THE PLOUGHMAN. Pass. V. The king goes to church, and afterwards to meat, and at this point of the vision the dreamer awakes. But it is not for long; he soon falls asleep again, and has a second vision, in which he again sees the field full of folk, and Conscience preaching to the assembled people, reminding them that the late storm and pestilence were judgments of God. Repentance second the efforts of Conscience, and many begin to repent. Of these the first is Pride, who makes a vow of humility. The second is Luxury, who vows to drink only water. The third is Envy, who is described with much particularity, and who confesses his evil thoughts and his attempts to harm his neighbours.¹ The fourth, Avarice, who confesses how he lied and cheated, and taught his wife to cheat. The fifth, Gluttony, who (on his way to church) is tempted into a beerhouse, of the interior of which the author gives a life-like and perfect picture. He too repents, though not till he has first become completely drunk and afterwards felt the ill effects of drinking. Lastly, Sloth declares his resolution to amend and to make all due restitution. Robert the robber is also introduced, praying earnestly for forgiveness.

Pass. VI. All the penitents set out in search of Truth, but no one knows the way. Soon they meet with a palmer, who has met with many saints, but never with one named Truth. At this juncture Piers the Ploughman “puts forth his head,” declaring that he knows Truth well, and will tell them the way, which he then describes.

Pass. VII. The pilgrims think the way long, and want a guide. Piers says he will come himself and shew them, when he has ploughed his half acre. Meanwhile, he gives good advice to the rich ladies and to the knight. Before starting, Piers makes his will, and then sets all who come to him to hard work. Many shirk their work, but are reduced to subordination by the sharp treatment of Hunger. Next follow most curious and valuable passages respecting the diet of the poor, striking for higher wages, and the discontent caused by prosperity.

Pass. VIII. At this time, Truth (i.e. God the Father) sends ¹The character of Wrath is strangely omitted. Perceiving his mistake, the author, in Text B (his second edition), elaborated this character with much care.

Piers a bull of pardon, especially intended for kings, bishops, honest tradesmen, and the labouring poor, and (in the least degree of all) for even the lawyers. A priest disputes the validity of this pardon, and wants to read it. The dispute becomes so violent between this priest and Piers that the dreamer awakes, and the poem of Piers Ploughman (properly so called) ends with a fine peroration on the small value of popes' pardons, and the superiority of a righteous life over mere trust in indulgences.

III. VITA DE DOWEL, DOBET, AND DOBEST. Pass. IX. In introducing a new poem, the Vita de Do-wel, the author begins by describing a dialogue that passed between himself and two Minorite friars upon the doctrine of free-will. After this, he describes himself as again falling asleep, and perceiving a man named Thought. He asks Thought where Do-wel, Do-bet, and Do-best live, and Thought gives him some account of these, but says that the best person to give him further information is Wit. Soon after this, the dreamer (William) and Thought meet with Wit.

Pass. X. Wit tells William that Do-wel dwells in a castle called Caro, wherein also is enclosed the lady Anima, and they are guarded by constable In-wit and his five sons. Do-wel, he tells him further, consists in fearing God; Do-bet, in suffering patiently; and Do-best, in humility. Then follow very interesting discussions upon the good there is in well-assorted and lawful wedlock, and the evil there is in marriages that are ill-advised or mercenary, and in adulterous connections.

Pass. XI. The dreamer applies to yet one more adviser, viz. Dame Study, the wife of Wit. She inveighs with great justice and force against the way in which shallow would-be theologians cavil about the mysterious things of God, and unworthily amuse themselves with vain quibbles. At last, she commends the dreamer to Clergy and Scripture, from whom he may hope to learn yet more. Accordingly, he seeks these, and is favourably received. Clergy explains that Do-wel is nearly coincident with Vita Activa (the Active Life), that Do-bet consists in visiting the sick and those in prison, and that Do-best is—to relieve the poor by means of such vast wealth as was possessed by ecclesiastics for that purpose. But the ecclesiastics were far from doing their duty, and seemed to lie under the ban which declares the impossibility for rich men to enter heaven. Upon this, a dispute arises between Clergy and William, which gives William the opportunity of declaring the insufficiency of mere wisdom to obtain admittance into heaven, and the greater likelihood which honest but ignorant poor men have of attaining to the life eternal ;

Hast thou not read, in Kings,
how God told
Saul to slay Agag

Samuel said to Saul,

“ Go and kill

But because he did not so,

God sent to say

Neither Wisdom nor Wit could gainsay Reason's speech.

The king decreed that Reason was right, but said it was hard to govern so.

Reason declares
 it is easy.

The king says he assents to Reason's counsel ;

and hopes he will stay with him.

“ I will stay if Conscience be your counsellor.”

“ Yes,” said the king, “ let us live together till I die.

50. Omnia probate] Compare Text B. Pass. III. l. 335.

52. burgh] ? burgher MS. But burgh = borough is meant ; it is called a court in l. 57.

58. Cf. Prologue ; l. 62. Here follows the catchword—þe ferste ferly.

60. ȝouþe] miswritten ȝou · þe in MS. ; the metrical dot being inserted by mistake after the letter u. But the reading is certain ; cf. Text B. Pass. XI. 17, 34, 59 ; and especially observe the whole drift of Text B. Pass. XI.

62. A half-line has probably been lost here.

66. Cf. Pass. V. 5.

Than maunged I wit · vp at þe fulle,

For þe myssyng of mete · no mesour I coude. 72

With þat cam a knaue · with a confessoures face,

So Will made haste to write his Do-wel; and he also wrote his

70. bouȝte] cf. wrouȝþ, l. 87; lauȝþe, l. 55; &c.

71. Corrupt; probably two half-lines lost.

78. Fevers and Death appear in Text B. Pass. XX.

81. [tyne] The MS. has tyme, corruptly. See Pass. XI. 233.

86. þou] miswritten þe in the MS.; the being the preceding word.

87. wrouȝþ] = wrouȝte. Cf. l. 70. The reading worþe would make better sense.

94. The word wiste has evidently been dropped here, probably on account of wost following.

96. This means that, besides the Vita de Do-wel, Do-bet, et Do-best, the author wrote Peres the Plowman.

Of peres þe plowman · and mechel puple al-so ;
 And whan þis werk was wrouȝt · ere wille myȝte a-spie,
 Dep delt him a dent · and drof him to þe erþe,
 And is closed vnder clom · crist haue his soule ! 100

And so bad Iohan but · busily wel ofte,
 When he saw þes sawes · busily a-legged
 By Iames and by Ierom · by Iop and by opere,
 And for he medleþ of makyng · he made þis ende. 104
 Now alle kenne creatures · þat cristene were euere,

 To lyue as þat lord lykyþ · þat lyf in hem putte.

 And alle lordes þat louyn him · lely in herte,
 God saue hem sound · by se and by land ;
 Marie moder and may · for man þou by-seke ;

 Amen. 112

John But added
 this ending.

God save King
 Richard, and all lords that love him !

Explicit do-Well.

Nomen scriptoris · tisot plenus amoris.

98—100. These are the author's own words; he kills himself off, by way of finishing his poem, but he lived to re-write it, nevertheless.

101—112. Obviously added, as stated, by another hand, viz. that of John But, who made a second "end," because he was accustomed to "meddle with makyng," i. e. to compose verses.

102. busily] Read sothely? Busily is repeated from the line above.

NOTE ON PASSUS XII.

THE discovery of the unique copy of the greater part of this Passus is due to Mr Geo. Parker, assistant in the Bodleian Library, from observation of my note at p. 154 of the volume containing Text A of Piers Plowman. It is a most important and satisfactory discovery, as offering the complete solution of the problem as to the true termination of Text A. I had made out this much ; (1) that there was once a Passus XII., or more strictly a Passus tertius de dowel, of which 18 lines were preserved in MS. U (belonging to University College, Oxford) ; (2) that this Passus must have been the concluding one of the Poem of Dowel in its earliest form ; (3) that it must have contained considerably less than 180 lines, as shown by the state of the Vernon MS. ; (4) that it must, in fact, have consisted of less than 131 lines, as shown by the state of the University College MS. All these suppositions are now fulfilled ; the missing portion—100 lines long—was found by Mr Parker in MS. Rawl. Poet. 137, in the Bodleian Library, the very existence of which was unknown to me until the Rawlinsonian MSS. were recently catalogued. This is now here printed, with various readings of the first 19 lines, one of which, the sixth, is omitted in the University College copy. This Rawlinson MS. is corrupt in places ; in fact, every MS. of Piers Plowman is corrupt occasionally ;—but it is sufficiently good to show us clearly how the poem ended. I here add a formal description of it, to supplement the descriptions on pp. xv—xxiv.

XI. MS. Rawlinson Poet. 137 ; on vellum ; of the early part of the fifteenth century. Size, about $9\frac{1}{2}$ in. by $5\frac{3}{4}$. It consists of 41 leaves bound together, containing the whole of Piers Plowman, Text A. The four loose leaves, mentioned below as forming part of the old cover, are numbered 42—45. It is very remarkable as being the only perfect copy of its kind. At the beginning is the important heading—"Hic incipit liber qui vocatur pers plowman. Prologus ;" and this is the only copy of any kind I have yet seen wherein the word Prologus occurs. See Page I, first footnote. At the end is the very important colophon—Explicit Do-wel, shewing that the poem really did end here, in its earliest form. It is beyond a doubt copied from an earlier MS., viz. the very same one that MS. U (No. IV) was copied from. The text is in precisely the same wrong order, the misarrangement of which is explained at p. xx. It has nearly the same readings, such as when I south wente (Prol. l. 1)—y wente wyde (l. 4)—I succuade (l. 10)—tryly outgryd (where MS. U has a-tird; l. 14); and so on. But it nevertheless varies slightly from that MS. occasionally, the most curious instance which I have noticed being in the Prologue, at l. 54, where MS. Rawl. has the lines—

Schopyn hem ermytes · here ese to haue.
on fele halue · fonden hem to done,
Lederes þei be of loundayes · and with þe lawe medle.

All these MS. U omits, possibly on account of an undecipherable word in the second line, where MS. Rawl. has a blank space. But the most curious point about the two latter lines is their non-appearance in other copies. After Piers Plowman follow "Fragments of the old French Romance of Guy earl of Warwick, four leaves on vellum." ff. 42—45 (end of MS.)¹

Ces ciz li quice ad rïame.
Assez sur donc or e argent.
Del son meint vesselment.
Sire qûs Jonas dit li rei.
Entendez ore vers moi.
Ma vie me auez ore garri
Par ceo cher ke esta ici, &c.

On fol. 42 b is written in an old and large hand, Hoc volumen conceditur ad vsum fratrum minorum de obseruantia cantuarie. The name of the scribe was one Tisot.

I have not the slightest doubt of the entire genuineness of the new portion. It is Langland's beyond a doubt, every word of it, from line 1 down to the end of line 100. All these lines are not only in his manner, but contain his favourite words, phrases, and turns of expression, and have the same changes of rhythm as we find in his works elsewhere. We obtain also a new proof that the author's name was "Will;" as had been already ascertained by observing that Thought calls the author "Wille" in Pass. IX. l. 118, just after it had been noted (l. 62) that the same Thought was acquainted with the author's "kind" or Christian name. We learn further that the author's original idea was to conclude the poem in the following way. "I met," he says, "with a man named Fever, who was the messenger of Death." Fever brought a letter from Death, and was authorized to slay Life. "If I may"—says our author—"I would go with you on your way." But Fever tells him to live on, as God has ordained, to continue to do well, and to look for a reward in Paradise, if he will only be regular at prayers, and ready to do profitable works. "Now William (i. e. the author) knew by his conscience that this speech required immediate attention, and so he made haste and completed the poem here written; and besides this Poem of Do-wel, he wrote the poem about Piers Plowman and many others;

and when this work was wrought, ere Will might spy, Death dealt him a dint, and drove him to the earth;
and he is enclosed under clay; now Christ have his soul!"

It is obvious that this notice of his own death is a mere flourish, introduced for the sake of winding up the poem at a moment when he had no idea of expanding and rewriting it; which, however, he certainly did, and even used again some of the phrases and thoughts contained in this very portion at the end of which he kills himself off. And with these words—"Christ have his soul!"—the poem, in its first form, truly ends. But in the present copy we have 12 superfluous lines, added by one "Johan But," who, having read the whole poem, and being satisfied that most of the ideas in it could be well supported by quotations from James, Jerome, Job, and others, was pleased to dignify it with an ending of his own, as he had been accustomed to metrical composition himself, having before then "meddled in making," i. e. dabbled in verse. But he has very little more to say than to hope that God will bless all men and teach them to do right; and so God save King Richard and all his lords, and may Mary, mother and maiden, beseech for man, and may Christ bring us all to bliss. The commonplaceness of these lines, and the smallness of their number, is of some importance. It shews us how men fared who attempted to add to the master-poet's words, and it affords some proof of the genuineness of the numerous additions which Langland made in his later versions, and which are not in the "Johan But" style by any means.

CRITICAL NOTES, ETC.

CRITICAL NOTES.

[The following notes explain a few things more at length with respect to the various readings of the MSS. ; to have inserted them in the footnotes would have been inconvenient.]

PROLOGUE, l. 14. In the word I-maket in the text, the MS. has a short tag to the final t ; a similar tag occurs twice elsewhere, one instance being in the word prechet (Pass. I. l. 137). It has no significance.

I have altered wonderliche to trizely, to preserve the alliteration, although MS. H supports the reading of V. The fuller alliterations found in the later copies were no doubt due, partly to corrections by the author himself, and partly to emendations (often ignorantly made) by copyists. Thus in l. 20, Eringe was soon changed (no doubt by the author) into settyng, but it does not follow that the alteration should be made in this early text. Nevertheless, I have ventured to write trizely here, for the reason given by Mr Wright in making a similar change. "Though we find instances of irregularity in the sub-letters (or alliterative letters in the first [part of the] line) in Pierce Plowman, the chief-letter is not so often neglected." In other places, I have not always given my reason for making alterations in the text, but the footnotes will generally supply one ; and besides, I have always had regard to Text B.

22. Alliteration is here at fault. Even if we write And wonnen þat for þat monie of, it is still imperfect.

28. This line is repeated at Pass. VII. l. 134.

39. The two parts of this line are (in V) written in separate lines.

41. See note to l. 14.

54. The omission of hem is a mere mistake ; it is certainly required, and assists the alliteration.

63. The reading and he is perhaps the best ; it improves both the sense and the alliteration, and it is supported by Pass. I. l. 55.

68. I have here missed noting a small, yet important variation ; instead of "and Fasting" MSS. T and U read "of Fasting;" in the former case, Falsnesse and Fasting are considered separately ; but in the latter case, the phrase Falsnesse of Fasting means the "breaking of vows made that they would fast."

71. Mr Morris (following Mr Wright) has printed bouchede ; but the æ's and n's in this MS. are often distinguishable, and in this case the n is quite plain. Cf. the readings bunchiþ and bunchid, which are quite clear also. The reading bouches is open to doubt. "Bunchon, tundo, trudo." Prompt. Parv.

75. The reading of the text is supported by MS. H, but the alliteration is improved by the alteration, His sel schulde not be sent.

79. The chief-letter of the alliteration is wanting.

81. The word tyme should certainly be inserted, for even MS. V has the phrase schþe Pestilence tyme elsewhere. See Pass. XI. l. 59.

108. For and the MS. has ad, by mistake; another form, an, is not uncommon. The mistake is repeated in Pass. II. l. 17.

PASSUS I. l. 1. For derke a great improvement is to read merke, as in Text B.

4. The reading loft is altogether wrong; even toft would have been better, as that would agree with Prol. l. 14, and Pass. I. l. 12.

8. The chief-letter of the alliteration is missing.

37. The same remark applies here. *W*ord = world; there is no need of an l; we also find, in old English, the spellings werd and ward.

39. Seo = see, in the imperative mood, and the sentence means, "perceive it well inwardly;" but set is a simpler and perhaps better reading.

46. The alliteration is defective, as also in ll. 50, 58, 120.

69. For hit wore MS. H has þis was.

79. Instead of teche we might with advantage read kenne, both here and in ll. 90 and 127, and the alteration would be supported by l. 130; but I have preferred leaving the text intact to making three alterations.

87. The second doþ seems repeated by mistake; I prefer willeþ, with which cf. Text B.

121. I am not sure that "wende" is required, and have therefore not inserted it.

122. There is no doubt about the reading of V, as Corouneþ is spelt with a capital letter; but c and t are hardly distinguishable in some MSS., so that tronen and crouen would look very much alike: still, MS. T has tronen, which suits the alliteration.

128. For Corps MS. H has body, written over an erasure.

135. For techeþ the true reading is probably wisseþ, and this would explain how such readings arose as witnesseth and askiþ wytnesse, the latter of which is not very intelligible. Cf. Pass. XI. l. 8.

137. The reading of V—preehet þe þin harpe—must surely be wrong, being meaningless; preehet seems to be a contraction of preche it.

139. The omission of the final þ in Cunseþ is probably due to the word þer following.

143. MS. U omits the word wo, evidently by mistake.

148. The wrong reading hy (for heȳe) is easily explained; the scribe must have been thinking of the mercy shewn by Christ to the penitent thief; but this idea does not agree with the statement that they "pierced his heart."

149, 150. Though V has only one line, it is so long as to suggest that it is made up of parts of two; it must have been originally,

Forþi I rede þe [riche · haue reuþe on þe pore, þauz þou beo] Mihtful of Mayn · be Meke of þi wordes.

MS. H has,

þerfore I rede þec ryzte · haue rewþe of þe pore,
þeiþ þou be myztful of mayn · be meke of þi warkys.

152. For 3e schul MS. H has þou schalt, and for 3e wenden it has þou wendest, both variations being written over erased words. There are several crasures and alterations in MS. H hereabouts, and the alterations are all for the worse, judging by what can be traced, or guessed at by comparison with the present text.

155, 156. In the first of these lines it would improve the metre to write lelly for trewely; and in the second, to write goodliche for Treweliche. But there is a certain propriety in the continuous repetition of trewe and treweliche, which is destroyed by these alterations.

160. MS. V is here clearly wrong, but I have kept the word Fey, merely altering its place. Fey = faith, as in l. 14 of this Passus; fuit or feet = feat, i. e. deeds or works.

175. MS. V abruptly ends the Passus here, but the remaining lines seem required, and are found in THUH₂D.

182, 183. These lines have occurred before; see ll. 123, 124, by help of which we might write them thus, according to the spelling adopted in V;

Forþi I sigge as I seide er · bi siht of þe textes, Whon alle tresor is I-triþet · Treuþe is þe beste.

PASSUS II. l. 5. I have altered the reading heo of MS. V to he, because the next line has the appearance of being added as an after-thought. The meaning of "heo stondeþ" would be "they stand;" but what seems to be intended is—"Look on thy left hand (quoth she) and see where he (i. e. Falsehood) stands; (there are) both, Falsehood and Flattery, and all his (i. e. Flattery's) whole company." The chief reason for supposing that stondeþ is here in the singular number is that the form of the question is such as to lead one to suppose so. He in MS. V means he, heo = she or they.

9. I since find that I omitted to insert that MS. T (as well as H₂) has the reading pureste in; this would certainly improve the alliteration, but MS. H supports the reading given, having richest. Still, the alteration should, perhaps, have been made.

21. Here the "chief-letter" is certainly lacking in all the MSS.; and this is what renders the propriety of altering such lines as line 9 so doubtful.

23. Forgid is only better than brouzt because of the alliteration. In Mr Wright's edition we find

Favel thorough his faire speche
Hath this folk enchaunted,

where the line is mended another way.

27. Here wyte is better than seo on every account.

28, 29. These lines must have been left out in V by mistake, because the lines as they stand, “ƿat þou miht seo ȝif þou wolt · whuche þei ben alle, Bote ȝif þow wilne to wone · wīẏ trenþe in his Blisse,” hardly make sense. Line 31, on the contrary, being found in MS. II only, may be an interpolation; it is but a poor line.

34. This line, occurring in II only, may be an interpolation, but something of the sort is greatly wanted to make the sense clearer; and this is why I have inserted it, notwithstanding that it fails to be an alliterative line. I ought to have added that, in MS. II, the next line begins with

And sawe al ƿat ryeche retenaunce, &c.

38. The reading fyn is supported by MS. V itself; for see l. 51;—“þe fyn was arered.”

56. The reading of V—scheuren (omitting to)—seems to be a mere error.

59. This line is much wanted; probably omitted in V accidentally.

64. Perhaps the words “of leecherie” should have been inserted; read
Wīẏ alle þe lordschupe [of leecherie] · of lengþe and of brede.

76. It should have been added that MS. H inserts and, having the reading “and paulyns douȝter.” It thus appears that “Pers þe pardonor” and “Paulynes doctor” were probably different persons.

87. Compare l. 101. All the various readings, in both lines, are clearly due to attempts at improving the alliteration.

88. In all the MSS. the chief-letter is wanting.

97. MS. T has the spelling “notories,” but it is only the first a in “Nafaries” that need be altered.

108. The reader will observe that I have omitted the word “on,” as not needed any longer, when “counseil” is inserted.

118. This line (like ll. 136—139, and 141—143) is a sort of explanatory gloss, and is almost certainly spurious. It means that men cease to believe those who often deceive them; a remark which has nothing to do with the context.

121. Part of this line is written in a later hand, and the words are ill arranged; the true reading is probably,

Many comen to counforte · from eare þe false.

129. For “Cuntre” we should probably read “Schires.”

136—143. See note to l. 118.

160. Tome, meaning leisure, is no doubt the reading; see Text B.

175. The curious reading of T is easily explained; any skynes is there written for anys kynes or anyskynys (any kinds of); the forms alleskynnes (all kinds of) and noskynnes (no kind of) also sometimes occur in Early English, and these are instances of the genitives anys (of any), alles (of all), and nones (of none); see also the footnote to Passus X. l. 2.

183. The reading of V (dune) might stand, as it gives sense, viz. “and the din heard." But the alteration to dune seems preferable, considering the various readings.

200. It would appear that hem was originally the reading in V, and that it was inconsiderately altered to him, owing to the frequent occurrence of him, as in ll. 199, 201, 202, 203, 204, &c.

206. The right reading is probably not kepten, but copenen; cf. Text B.

PASSUS III. l. 15. The reading "be clergie leue" suits the alliteration, and is supported by Text B.

19, 20. These lines are absolutely necessary to the sense, if the reading of V is to be retained in l. 18; they were probably omitted in V by mere mistake.

23. The chief-letter is wanting.

26. Here launzen is the past tense of lacchen, to take; thus V gives the right sense, but the wrong word; cf. Text B.

32. H supports V in the reading tellen; but callen is better, and occurs in Text B.

43. In H this line ends a page, and the scribe has given two readings of the first half of the line, viz. "A-monge þese courteurs & þe comyns," and "A-monge þese clerkes and knyȝtes" (sic).

45. Though V alone reads schomeliche, it should be retained as more forcible than schameles; it is, of course, to be understood as ironical.

45. Sif must be inserted, metri gratiā; it is in Text B.

51. The chief-letter is wanting.

67—72. This sentence is incomplete, having no principal verb; we should, for the sense, supply "I lere ȝou," from l. 61, before "As to punissen;" i. e. "I instruct you to punish." Cf. ll. 91—94

80. H reads "presentes withoute pans." The sense is "other presents besides pence," or, "presents that are not given in actual money."

88. H supports the reading "brenne;" but "forbrenne" supplies the chief-letter f, though not at the beginning of a strongly accented syllable.

91. The chief-letter is wanting here, and also in l. 98; and in l. 93 it is badly placed.

100. The reading melodyes of the Vernon MS. can be thus accounted for; the y and þ are, throughout, only distinguishable by careful inspection; and thus melodyes is put for melod þes, i. e. spake these. Nevertheless, it seems better to use the present tense meleþ (as in the other MSS.), and to adopt the usual spelling þese.

105. It would greatly improve the alliteration to read late com instead of com late; but the chief-letter is not unfrequently thus badly placed; see ll. 93, 124.

133, 134. Fulse is here a plural adjective, but trew is singular.

141. Tre means our; the sense requires your, spelt ȝoure in l. 62. Another spelling of your is oure (see l. 64), and for this, vre is miswritten.

151. For the second leo H reads ȝ hem, which improves the sense.

167. Congey may be miswritten for Conge þe, the y and þ being so much alike; but Pass. IV. l. 4 is against this supposition.

174. I could hardly insert hals instead of Nekke, as the MSS. have half; but yet hals is probably the right reading, and occurs in MSS. of type B.

189, 224. The alliteration is defective.

243. This line does not run well, probably because the word apert is lost; read, Hit is apert permutacion.

244. þou is the reading of Text B.

245. The alliteration seems to be altogether lost.

260. I have since observed that the m in Samuel in MS. V is partly erased, thus leaving Sauel, i. e. Saul.

264. clause; in Text B we here find cas = case.

265. The reading of V—manged—is a mere mistake, and it has also caused the scribe to write In Aventure for In Aunter or An Aunter; the alliteration resides in the letter n, the words being run together, much as though it ran,

I naunter hit nuyged me; a nende wol I make; compare nale and noke for ale and ok after the article þe. Text B has, An aventure it noyed men.

266—269. I have little doubt that these lines ought to be put lower, having ll. 270, 271 above them, as in TUD and in Text B. But as II preserves the order of V (though it omits ll. 265, 266), I have not made the transposition. The sense is much the same either way.

274. No MS. has here the right reading; it should be, or takeþ asȝyn his wille, as in Text B. V and II are right, except in putting doþ for takeþ (which spoils the alliteration); the other MSS. are right in suggesting takeþ, but wrong otherwise.

PASSUS IV. l. 11. I insert Crist for god on the sole authority of T, because it is the reading of Text B, and supplies the chief-letter.

15. For sende T has sente.

51. Text B resembles TUD; the words And seide do not count in scansion, but even then the line, as in TUD, is very long, and the best line would be made by reading,

And seide, "Hedde I lone of my lord · luite wolde I recche."

65. The word þorne seems wanted; yet it does not occur in Text B; and only in MS. V of type A.

69. catel suits the alliteration, and is in Text B.

73. The note means that the quotation from U is written all in one long line; and so it is in D; clearly owing to the omission of the first half of l. 72.

91. The reading Crist is better for the alliteration, but only appears in U; Text B says, "so me Crist helpe."

94. hynen was probably omitted in V because of myne preceding; the scribe may have thought he had finished writing hynen, when he had only finished myne; Text B has "myne hewen;" cf. l. 42 above.

114. The misreading do euere in T and D is a mere corruption of the word Dore;

124. That gold in MS. V is an error is plain enough; the context shews that gold is the very last thing that "Reson" would swear by.

126. Whatever be the meaning of this line, withouten must be a misreading; Texts B and C have with; and with-outen seems peculiar to V.

151. The alliteration is defective; Text B shews that quod should be seide, and the leading letter of the line is an S.

158. This is a good example of the variations of spelling; lyue and leue are the same word, repeated.

PASSUS V. l. 29. wyueue. Mr Wright prints wyueue, and in several MSS. it is doubtful; but in MS. T the u is made with peculiar care, and so is the n following. The misreading in U is owing to the fact that the scribe first wrote heueue, and then drew the pen through it and substituted wyueue, which suggests a similarity in sound between the words heueue and wyueue. Again, the misreading in V in the line above, staueues for staues, seems due to this same word wyueue, and to confusion between the endings of staue and wyueue, which also points to the probability of the letter being u. The wyueue pyne, or punishment for women, is intelligible, and may mean the eueking-stool (cf. pyynyng-stoles, Pass. III. 60); but wyueue pyne is inexplicable.

58. dynen; so in Text B.

83. As I his frend were is the right order of words, and is used in Text B. For the syllable I gives the chief-letter of the alliteration, and we must lay a slight stress on it, as also on the first syllables of heilede and kendely.

100, 101. Text B also has these lines rightly arranged; hence it is certain that the arrangement in V and H is a mere mistake.

109, 110. I mark T as faulty because such a long line is inadmissible; and even the first line of H is somewhat of the longest. But the fact is that all the early MSS. seem here wrong, owing to the omission of a half line—(as a blynde hugge)—for which see Text B. The confusion arose from there being two lines following having the same rime-letter (b). The arrangement in the Vernon MS., though perhaps not really right, seems well and makes good sense.

114. Text B also gives this line rightly, in the same shape.

125. lernde I should perhaps have been I readrit, as in T, U, and Text B; but I let it stand because H agrees with V, and my object is to avoid alteration as much as possible.

131. Here, however, the word by must be inserted because it is necessary to the sense. V seems to have a quartrun more peisede, but there are marks shewing that the words are to be transposed.

142. sobely; Text B, however, has so the ik, so thrive I.

165. The reading in V is absurd; the ribibor and ratoner are distinct personages.

182. Partly imitated from l. 177; not in Text B, and probably spurious.

188. lotering. It is to the credit of MS. V that it has preserved this word; for Text B, like T and H₂, has louryng, which is inferior. It is from the French losterie, badinage.

195. I-wipet. I suppose the true reading to be waxed, as in Text B, and in T, H, and U. Mr Wright guessed the meaning of waxed to be washed, but in that case it is unlikely that so many MSS. would have preserved the letter x. It probably means waxed, i. e. stopped up, as one would stop with wax, much as in the following:—

“But to ende the hole were stopped and faste made,
A litell cloute eute he without delay,
With wax melled, stopped the hole alway,” &c.

Romans of Partenay (E. E. T. S.), l. 2817.

The metaphor is rather a bold one, to talk of waxing a thing up with furze, but this seems to me the only way of getting any sense out of the passage. Cf. the spellings of the word in H and U.

199. lacche; so in Text B.

202—207. Though these lines are in U only, they appear in all later versions of the poem, and are certainly genuine.

232. deore, dear. There is no doubt about the reading; see Text B. V has dore miswritten for deore, for which spelling see Pass. VI. l. 83.

257. The meaning is, “that he should polish anew his pike named Penitence;” where a pike means a staff with a spike to it, such as is used by pilgrims. Compare Text B, “þat penitencia his pyke · he shulde polsche newe.”

If the word him be retained, it either means polish up for himself, for his own use; or it merely signifies it, the word pyke being masculine, as the next line clearly shews.

PASSUS VI. Passus V. and VI. are in most MSS. considered all as one Passus. It is one of the simplest and best tests of a MS. of the earliest form, that they are separated, and numbered as distinct. It is curious that only MS. H has preserved the first two lines, the first of which scans but poorly.

30. kende; Text B has kenned; the alliteration shews it is right.

57. Also in Text B.

73. Text B also inserts se, which is necessary to the sense.

98, 99. The alterations are authorized by Text B.

103. kepe; so in Text B, and required by the alliteration.

114. The curious readings in U, viz. unwelcome and unfair, instead of welcome and fair, can be explained by arranging the subject-matter in a different order, i. e. by altering the punctuation.

Lines 114, 115 are taken together, and stand thus:—

“He is wondirly unwelcome · and unfair vndirfongen
But if he be sib · to some of þese seuene.”

This arrangement, however, is very awkward.

PASSUS VII. ll. 22, 25. kennest, kenne. So also in Text B.

29. I quoted here the various spellings of labre, from an idea that it was misspelt for labore; but it seems to have been intentional, judging by ll. 221, 259 of this very Passus.

54. The reading we fynde treupe, as in T and H, suits the alliteration better, and is the reading of Text B; but the alteration seemed hardly worth making.

57. The alliteration of each half-line is kept separate, h being adopted in the first part of the line, and s in the second. A similar example occurs again very soon, at l. 69; and perhaps at l. 73. Cf. V. 125, and the note.

68. It should be noted that “Deleantur de libro viventium: et cum Justis non scribantur” is all one quotation.

71. The reader who consults MS. U must remember to turn back here some 18 folios to fol. 5 b, or he will not find ll. 71—215.

85. leo; MSS. H and U have Chirche is properly feminine, so that him in l. 86 may mean the parson (persona ecclesiæ).

94. The chief-letter is wanting.

109. The reading of U, dieu sa (= saue) dame emme, is borrowed from the Prologue, l. 103.

124. The word holde may mean faithful, and it is very probable that the other reading olde is corrupt, but it is difficult to make sure of this, because holde may be written for olde in the same way that heren is for eren in ll. 60, 99. Text B has olde.

130. The word brod in T has a small k written over the d, evidently by way of correction.

133. The word gare is uncommon in this version of the poem, but occurs in l. 289 below.

134. Repeated from Prol. l. 28.

140, 141. The reading given in the text is the only one that satisfies all the requirements of the case. It is better to put wastours in the plural, because of ll. 144, 149, 151; and at the same time the word one is wanted in the singular, to denote the particular ringleader who speaks again in l. 153, and of whom Hunger made a special example in l. 161, where V errs in using the plural number.

145. Faulty in scansion.

159. hoped, hopped: but none of the MSS. double the p.

181. sonenday may not mean Sunday; the expression reminds us of the very first line of the Prologue—whon softe was þe sonne; and a “softe sonenday” is a day when the sun is mild and warm.

182. hot may = hote, i. e. oaten; cf. the various readings, and note to l. 124.

186. Al seems to make better sense, but the line is not in Text B.

197. The chief-letter seems wanting, unless we put a little stress on the word to; but the MSS. all agree, and it is the same in Text B.

202. mete ; I let this word stand, as it is in VIIU, and we have bred twice in the next line ; still Text B has bred, and T has breed.

204. Banne ; so in V ; but I hardly understand it or the word bane. The reading of II—a-bane—seems to hint at a-bate, which is the actual reading of several MSS. ; see Text B.

215. Seint Matheu is really St Luke, but it is the author's own mistake. The reading permyde for perwith should be noticed ; it gives a sort of alliteration to the line, (Mak, permyde, Matheu), which is otherwise wanting.

226, 228. The words in small print are written over the word apuntum in V.

239. There is little alliteration here, except in the words him, and his (repeated).

241. The words hyf, lif, leef certainly end with f (very plainly written), not with a long s (f).

251. I-ȝeten = eaten, not gotten. The very soft y sound of the ȝ does not destroy the alliteration, which is made up of vowel-sounds.

257. The alliteration is obtained either by supposing each half-line complete in itself (the first half having h and the second c), or by adopting the reading in T and U, which is given in Text B.

311. At the end of the Passus, we find, in MS. T, the following entry in a later hand.

“Here is lefte oute v. versis whiche is in the olde coppi, & ar set benethe.

and when you se the sune amisse · & to mynkes heades,

and a mayde have the masteri · And mvltyply by (eight) hight, (sic) than shall deathe withdraw · and derthe be Justice, and davi the diker · shall die for hunger,

But if god of his goodness · gravnte vs a trewe.”

But the writer of this makes a slight mistake ; for these lines belong to MSS. of Class B, and do not appear in any of Class A. See Text B.

PASSUS VIII. 1. We must lay a slight stress on to, for the alliteration's sake.

5, 6. heren has no h prefixed in any MS. but V ; see Pass. VII. ll. 4, 60.

45, 46. This reading of MS. II is doubtless right ; see l. 61 below. Text B gives little help, but Text C has the lines, which gives the sense, and authorizes the word “loþ.”

“Men of lawe hadden lest · þat loþ weren to plede

47. Ps. xiv. 5. “Qui pecuniam suam non dedit ad usuram, et munera super innocentem non accepit. Qui facit hæc, non movebitur in æternum.” For the latter part of the quotation, see l. 55 below. The word eorum is from Text B. I cannot quite trace the quotation, A Regibus, &c. It seems to be a reminiscence of Ecclesiasticus xxxviii. 2—“A Deo est enim omnis medela, et a rege accipiet donationem.”

58. þriuen, thriven ; hence, beo þriuen = are thriven, i. e. thrive. But though this seems quite right, it is proper to note that the reading is unsupported. Texts B and C vary from A hereabouts.

73. The reading given is quite satisfactory, and is in Text B.

75. wo here does not mean woe, but is equivalent to the woo of MS. H, and the wehe of MS. T, a word used to denote the sound made by animals; the usual reading of MSS. is wehe. See whi, wey, or wehe in IV. 21.

78. The misreading Fautes in V is merely owing to the omission of the mark of contraction for n; it should be "Faūtes;" see Pass. X. ll. 58, 64.

88. loue of. The omission of these words in V is a mere accident; the line is left far too short.

106. This reading is confirmed by Text B.

109. So in Text B; here the author, quoting Matthew, refers to Luke; just above (Pass. VII. l. 215) he makes the exactly reverse error.

114. who fynt, i. e. who findeth or provideth for them; so in Text B.

125, 126. These lines are of very doubtful authenticity, and may have been added by the scribe of MS. H to explain the Latin quotation. Most MSS. have Ecce for Ejice, owing probably to confusion between Ecce and the less common and curious-looking word Eiice, as it would be spelt.

128. waitide, looked; so in Text B.

136. The quotation as given in H is corrupt; the word est should not appear: quod (which seemed to me indistinct) is right, but optat should be optans.

"Somnia ne cures, nam mens humana quod optans, Dum vigilat, sperat, per somnum cernit id ipsum."

Dionysius Cato; Distich. II. 31.

The English translation of it in H is almost certainly a spurious line.

136—139. MSS. T and U and Text B help us out here. V reads,

"Ac for the Bible bereþ witnesse · hou daniel deynode þe Dremels of a kyng · þat Nabugodonosor hette."

The confusion arose from the shortness of l. 137, which is lengthened in U by writing "how daniel þe prophete." And then, this line being once miswritten, the next line had to be shortened by cutting away part of it.

153. Not in Text B; hence men depends on MS. T only, but would suit the alliteration excellently.

177. A small cross is prefixed to this line in MS. T, no doubt as a mark that it is imperfect. A few other imperfect lines are marked in the same way, the marks being as old as the rest of the writing.

187. Explicit, &c. This important note, for which we have the authority not only of MSS. T, U, H, and D, but of many others, gives us the right titles of the poems, and shews that the first one, the "Vision of William concerning Piers the Plowman," ends here, and that the remaining verses form a second and distinct poem, which is, however, a sort of continuation of the former. This is very clearly pointed out even in MS. V; for we here meet with the only title which can be found in it; see Passus IX. l. 1.

It is pretty clear that Langland had intended to wind up his poem here by discoursing on the excellences of Doing Well; and in this concluding passage, the word Do-wel accordingly occurs four times, without any hint of Doing Better or Doing Best. But an afterthought suggested that Do-well, if supplemented by Do-bet and Do-best, deserved that much more should be said about it, and that, in fact, here was matter for a whole new poem. The opening lines of Passus IX. (which, it should be remembered, is only a prologue, and therefore, like the first prologue, much shorter than the other Passus) seem to indicate a short lapse of time between the conclusion of the one poem and the commencement of the other. The poet's adventure with the two Minorite friars may possibly have had some foundation in fact; at any rate, it is very naturally introduced, and serves admirably to introduce a new vision.

PASSUS IX. Observe that the Title to this Passus is given at the end of Pass. VIII. It is the Prologue to the Vita de Do-well, as has just been said above.

3, 4, 5. For the alterations here, and in ll. 11, 12, 24, 32, see Text B.

11. The change of place of farre and passed greatly improves the metre; it is amply authorized.

20. The reading of V—a tom—is very curious; it is an evident corruption of at hom. It is also curious that MSS. of class B omit these two words.

47. The alteration is necessary in order to obtain the chief-letter of the alliteration, which is the s in self; and there is no s in the latter half of the line, as given in V.

50. þe occurs also in Text B.

64. wizt occurs in Text B, and is needed for the alliteration.

65. The corrupt reading in V probably arose from taking I-seide, the past participle, to mean I seide. Text B has the same as I have given, which is certainly right. In MS. T, we find the word seide, and just over it and in front of it the letter .l., the alteration having been made by the scribe himself.

66. seze þou, sawest thou. It seems better to insert þou, as in Text B.

80. The expression, Erl Auerous, is in Text B.

83. The Vulgate has, "Libenter enim suffertis insipientes, cum sitis ipsi sapientes;" but it is clear by the next line that the poet took the reading to be sufferte in the imperative mood. But in Text B we find suffertis, and a corresponding alteration of the following line.

95. püten; sic in MS. V, both here and elsewhere. The alteration of him into hem in this line and the next seems required; but it is just possible that the scribe of MS. V considered him as a plural. The alteration, however, would still be justified by the occurrence of hem in l. 94.

101. So in Text B.

107. þroly, quickly. This reading seems to be preserved in V only.

111. Also in Text B.

114. So in Text B.

118. hym techen; Text B has teche hym.

PASSUS X. Here the "Vita de Dowel" properly begins.

6—8. Miswritten in V after this manner;

A loueli lemmon lyk him-self · Anima heo hette,

To hire haþ Euvyc · A proud priker of Fraunce, Princeps huius mundi.

This mistake arose (1) from the shortness of l. 6; (2) from the fulness of the stop in the middle of l. 7; and (3) from supposing Princeps huius mundi to be an independent quotation. In order to make these three lines into two, the scribe had to omit to after lyk, and to neglect the alliteration altogether.

9. mikti; sic in MS. V; so I let it stand.

11, 12. The missing words are also in Text B.

27. Ceatour in MS. V, by mistake.

30. The meaning of lisse and Blisse is the same, but lisse is required for the alliteration, and appears in very many MSS., although they give the word Blisse afterwards, in l. 36.

31. arn, not ben, must be the reading, and is supported by Text B.

50. The reading kepeth is also supported by ll. 10, 15, 24.

52. I have little doubt the reading given is right, but there is hardly any more evidence than that given, for this line does not appear in Text B. Still we have the evidence of MSS. TUH₂, and it is clear that V is corrupt, as Bringeþ spoils the alliteration, besides affording but little sense.

53. The reading in U, goynge, may have been suggested by mistaking cunnyng for cumyng, and it would then strike the scribe that goynge would suit the alliteration better than cumyng.

61. ben is wanted to complete the sense.

71. The reluctance of the scribe of V to write the word wizt is curious; a similar correction has been often made before; see, for example, Pass. IX. l. 64; and cf. XI. 122.

72. Either of or ouer must be inserted; the former suits the flow of the line better.

75. ryte (MS. U) means blame.

86. It may be doubted whether David really meant to praise the consolation to be found in a birch-rod!

89. I have not yet traced this quotation. MS. V has, Intencio I hoïe.

95. kepe, not hede, suits the alliteration.

106. I cannot yet trace this quotation.

107. The alliteration is defective; it is somewhat better preserved in MSS. T and U, but not so much better as to justify alteration.

124. molde is of course right; cf. Pass. III. l. 71.

135. The chief-letter is wanting.

143. The readings a barn, and wrouzte are made certain by observing the line following, "Caym men eleped him."

152. Sem was no doubt written for Seth as being a more familiar name; else it is obviously wrong.

154. suster sed, i. e. sister's seed ; see l. 173.

165. banne (not curse) suits the alliteration.

190. The misreading in V here was a necessary consequence of the misreading in l. 188. The scribe clearly did not understand the allusion to Dunmow.

193. The reading given is from T, slightly modified ; for it is usual in MS. V to use -ep as the plural ending of the imperative, and to write ou instead of 3ow, and it is better to adhere to a uniform system, where it can so easily be preserved.

197. The punctuation is difficult. In Text B, there seems to be almost a full stop in the middle of this line ; but then, the subsequent lines vary considerably.

204, 205. The alliteration and Text B both shew that these lines are rightly restored.

213. werke ; so also in Text B.

PASSUS XI. 2. In Text B we find,

“ þat lene was of lere · and of liche bothe.”

13. The alliteration seems to be formed either by the initials of hit, leo, and heore, or by those of sigge and scheven.

18. cardel ; carded in Text B.

23. bene est. If the mark of interrogation be omitted, it is very natural that bene here should be turned into ce, as in MSS. TU. The Vulgate however (Jer. xii. 1) has “Quare via impiorum prosperatur : bene est omnibus qui prævaricantur et inique agunt ?” where the sentence is an interrogative one.

28. Observe how the voice is to be sustained at the end of this line ; i. e. as for him, he is but little loved.

30. Daunseled seems peculiar to MS. V ; cf. prov. Eng. daunted, fondled, made much of. Text B has daunted, tamed, put down, made little of, which does not suit the context.

46. The alliteration is hardly perceptible ; it is probably formed by dwelling on the f. Thus, in Mr Wright's text, we find, which is probably the correct reading, afyngred and afurst being a provincial pronunciation of of-hungred and of-thurst, i. e. afflicted by hunger and thirst.

Bothe a-fyngred and a-furst · and for chele quake,

71. musen on, &c. Text B ends the line with, “ þat muse moche on her wordes.”

79. to wite ; so in Text B ; cf. l. 81.

85. worþ ; so too in Text B ; it greatly improves the line. Cf. Pass. I. l. 26.

96. his ; so in Text B ; the reading hire is clearly wrong.

100. worþe ; see l. 85.

102, 104. This is another of the many instances where MS. V wrongly uses teche instead of kenne. Cf. Pass. VI. 30 ; VII. 22, 25.

111. The alliteration is defective.

131. gurlcs. It must be remembered that this means boys quite as much as girls; see Pass. X. l. 155.

134. kende; this surely must be the true reading, for c or k is required for the alliteration; it is supported by MS. T only, but we should compare ll. 102, 104, and the many passages where kenne is wrongly replaced by teche; see, e.g. Pass. I. 79; II. 4; VIII. 120. Text B varies, reading, "and compassed masouns."

137, 138. The alliteration helps us to restore these lines with certainty.

144. The word loue being feminine, the genitive may very well end in e; very numerous examples of this are given in Morris's "Specimens of Early English;" Introduction, p. lvii.

145. In some editions of Cato we find simules for simile, to the improvement of the prosody.

147. See note to ll. 102, 134.

151. The position of the words in V, viz. himself hit, makes the line halt instead of flowing smoothly.

155, 156. Text B has two lines very like these.

180. Text B varies here; but there is no doubt but that Actif it is I-hoten is the true reading. The subject of the poem is Vita de Do-wel, the "wel feir lyf" as it is called in l. 179; and the poet is merely repeating what he has already said in Pass. VII. 234-236. A great deal more is said about Activa Vita in Pass. XIII. of Text B.

181. The reader will observe by this extract that the Trinity MS. presents an excellent text.

191, 192, 193. These lines stand thus in MS. T,

"God wot, þis is dobet · sire dobest haþ benefices,

So is he best worþi be þat god in the gospel · grauntip & teehip."

The great length of the second line shews something wrong; next, the alliteration tells that benefices and best occur in the same line, and then only the words "God wot, þis is dobet" remain to form l. 191; whence it is plain that a half-line has here been lost. This has been recovered by help of the Ashmolean MS. and MS. Harl. 3954, and found to be —dobest wot þe soþe; for the readings there given are,

"Sekyrly, þis is dobet · dobest wot þe soþe;" (A.)

"Dredles, is dobet · dobest wot þe sothe (H.)

The omission of this half-line, and the confusion in the division of lines, arose from the fact of ll. 191 and 192 both having the same letter b as the rime-letter. The alliteration and rhythm also shew that the reading "Dredles" is the correct one, and it is a favourite word with Langland. "Sekyrly" is a mere gloss upon it.

215. wolde suits the alliteration, but shulde seems to be better grammar.

232. The reading of MS. T, "þat arn vneristene," &c., is a mere mistake of arn for an. But the reading vneristene is very curious, and is exactly contrary to what we should expect, viz. cristene. Yet MS. authority forbids alteration. Thus, we find in Harl. MS. 3954, and the line occurs in Text B in the same shape.

247. Mecaberis seems to be the author's own mistake, the seventh commandment being put for the sixth. The words of which “ne sle nouȝt” is the “kynde englissh” are “Non occides.”¹ I have ventured to write vindicta (though all the MSS. seem to have vindictam), because vindicta is the actual reading of the Vulgate.

253. markid withoute mercy, pre-ordained to life, without any need of a subsequent act of mercy; so most MSS.; but the reading of U, markid with mercy, is simpler.

273. shrefe, shrived. It ought to be shref, and the tag to the f can hardly mean a final e. It is another form of shrof, the more usual past tense of shrive or shrieve.

283. The misreading now probably arose from confusing non with nou.

285. The readings are,

And ȝet any I forget · for of fyue wyttis teehinge
 þat elergie of cristis mouþ · comendite what is neuere T;
 And ȝet am (or ani) I forget · of fyue wittes teehyng
 That Clergie of Cristes mouþ · comonded hit neuere D;
 And ȝit any I forget · for of fyue wittes teehyng
 That elergie of cristes mouȝt · comendite what is neuere H₂;
 And ȝit I forȝat ferþere · of fyue wittis teehyng
 Wat elergie of cristis mouth · comendid was A(shmole);
 And ȝet haue I forȝete ferthere · of v wittys teehyng þat clergyȝe of crystys mowth · comandyd was neuer. Harl. 3954;

Text B has the single line,

Clergye þo of crystes mouþ · comonded was it litel.

MS. U omits both lines.

From all these the sense intended is plain enough, and as regards the former line, it is clear that Ashmole and Harl. 3954 MSS. supply the word really wanted, viz. ferþere, owing to the absence of which TH absurdly introduce any and for to fill up the line. Again, as regards the latter line, the true form is shewn in Harl. 3954, only it is necessary to alter neuer to euere in order to preserve the sense. The reading neuer arose from considering the line as a simple statement instead of that which it really is, viz. a dependent clause. The reading what is in TH₂ is a curious and meaningless corruption of was. The lines, as given in the text, mean—“And yet I forget further—by help of the teaching of my five wits—that learning was ever commended by Christ's mouth;” i.e. “my five wits do not enable me to remember that Christ ever commended learning.”

¹ Mr Wright says, “A mistake in the original MS. for necaberis, as it is rightly printed in Crowley's edition.” But surely, non necaberis means—“thou shalt not be killed.”

303. In the preface, abundant reason is given in support of the view that the early version must have ended here, as is actually the case with MSS. Douce, Harl. 3954, and Ashmole, 1468; and this is where the poem probably ended also in the Vernon MS. The only MSS. that go beyond this point are TH²U. Of these, the two former are supplemented by what is really a portion of the C-class of MSS., and there is a consequent jumble in the numbering of the subsequent Passus and a very abrupt transition in the sense, sufficient to shew clearly that the junction of the A and C texts is but clumsily effected after all. It ought also to be noted that the quotation "Brevis oracio penetrat celum" does not strictly belong to the A-class of MSS., but to the C-class. But I have introduced it for two reasons: (1) because it is very appropriate and makes an excellent concluding line, and is closely connected with the sense of the lines before it, and (2) because it is useful as indicating the point of junction of the A and C texts, as the reader will find when he consults Text C. If the poem in its earliest form was ever continued beyond this point, it was probably continued in the manner indicated by MS. U, which has 18 lines of a "passus tercius" which are, as far as I can make out, unique.¹ Perhaps the poet may really have begun a third passus in this manner, which he afterwards gave up, and turned his attention to re-casting and expanding the whole poem. The 18 lines in MS. U are as follows:

Passus tercius de dowel, &c.

"Cryst wot," quod elergie · know it ² yif ye likeþ,
 I haue don my deuer · ye³ dowel to teeche;
 And who-so coueite to don betere · þan ye bok telleþ,
 He pasith apostlis lif · and put hem in-to angelis! 4
 But y se now as i seie · as me soþ þynkeþ, you⁴ woldist kunne yat⁵ i can · and carpyñ it after,
 Presumptuously par auenture · appose so manye, þat it myȝte turne me to tene · & theologie boþe. 8 ȝif i wiste witterly · you woldist don yer-after Al yat you askest · assoilen I wolde."
 Scornfulliche yo scripture · set vp here browes,
 And on elergie cryede · on godis holy name, 12 yat he schewiȝt⁶ ne schulde · but if it stryl were
 Of ye eardynal wit · & cristenynd in a font;
 And seide it so loude · yat selame me it þonte, þat it were seathe & slaundre · to holy cherehe, 16
 Scilhoþ⁷ theologie yat trewe is · tellen it deffendeþ;

¹ If there exists any other copy of these lines, I should be glad to have it pointed out to me.

² MS. "knowit."

³ "ye" for "þe."

⁴ "you" for "þou."

⁵ "yat" for "þat;" so too we have below "yer-after," "yo," for "þer-after" and "þo."

⁶ Should we read "schew it?"

⁷ Probably an error for "Sip."

Dauid godis derlyng · deffendep it also,
Vidi preuaricantes & thabesceram.

This may be thus briefly paraphrased :

"Christ knows," said Clergy, "I have done my duty in teaching you to do well ; and to do better is for angels to attain to. But I fear you want to learn all I know merely in order to eavil and vex me and Theology. If I thought you were in earnest, I would grant all you ask." But Scripture scornfully told him to be quiet, and talked so loud that I thought it a slight upon holy church ; as David says, "It grieveth me when I see the transgressors, because they keep not thy law."¹ What the exact meaning of lines 13 and 14 is, I can only dimly guess. Perhaps it is—"that he should not shew (declare it) unless it were considered as a dispute between supreme knowledge and one who is christened in a font." That is—in allusion to line 7, where Clergy thinks that the dreamer will perhaps, after being taught, become presumptuous and ask trying questions—Clergy ought not therefore to teach William anything at all unless he at the same time remembers that any discussion between them would but be a dispute between supreme knowledge (Clergy) and a mere infant (William). But the passage is certainly hazy.

It is pretty clear that this passage is supplanted in Text B by the first three lines of the Passus immediately following the passage with which Text A ends. The three lines are these :—

"Thanne scripture scorned me · and a skile tolde,
 And lakked me in latyue · and lyte by me she sette,
 And seyde, multi multa sciunt · et seipsos nesciunt."

And there are similar lines in Text C, in the middle of Passus II. de Do-wel.

"Þanne scripture scornede me · and many skyles schewede,
 And contynauunce made to clergize · to conge me, hit semede,
 And lackede me in latyn · and lith bi me sette,
 And seide, *multi multa sciunt,*² et seipsos nesciunt."

² MS. Vesp. B. xvi. reads sapiunt.

GENERAL COMPARISON OF TEXTS A AND B.

THE following is a list of parallel passages, and shews also where the texts differ. A few minor variations are not noticed.

PROLOGUE. Lines 1—49. So in B.

Here B inserts three lines.

Lines 50—83. So in B.

Here B inserts about 120 lines, containing the fable of the Cat and Rattons.

Lines 84—89. So in B.

Lines 90—95. Peculiar to A, but the sense of them is found in B, differently expressed, and at an earlier place.

Lines 96—109. So in B, with an extra line after l. 101.

PASSUS I. So in B, for the most part. The chief variations are that B inserts two lines after l. 31, puts ll. 96, 97 after l. 101, expands ll. 112, 113 into about 10 lines, and ll. 135—138 into about 17 lines.

PASSUS II. Substantially the same as Passus II. of B. The chief variations are in ll. 11—14, 19—74, which are expanded in B, and somewhat differently expressed.

Lines 75—212 agree very closely, except that ll. 150, 151 are expanded in B into 5 lines, and B has two more lines after l. 183.

PASSUS III. Lines 1—51. So in B, but ll. 18—20 somewhat vary.

Lines 52—66. The variations here are worth remarking.

Lines 67—282. So in B, very nearly; but ll. 228—231 have their place supplied by a longer passage; also ll. 252—259 vary.

After l. 282 B inserts more than 50 lines.

PASSUS IV. Somewhat expanded in Text B, especially in the following passages, viz. ll. 16—30, ll. 105—108, ll. 134—136, ll. 141—145. Otherwise, the texts substantially agree.

PASSUS V. Lines 1—33. So in B; except at ll. 11, 12, and 31.

Here B inserts about 6 lines.

Lines 34—39. So in B, with a new line after l. 35.

Here B inserts about 8 lines.

Lines 40—69. So in B, nearly

Lines 70—73. Differently expressed in B; the variation is worth notice.

Lines 74—99. So in B, nearly.

Here B inserts a couple of lines.

Lines 100—106. So in B, nearly.

Here B inserts a long and most important passage, descriptive of Wrath; altogether some 60 lines.

Lines 107—145. So in B, nearly, but note ll. 109—113.

Here B inserts a long and important passage, about the sins of Covetousness, and how he skinned the poor; more than 70 lines.

Lines 146—221. So in B, nearly; but note that l. 215 is expanded in B into fifteen lines.

Here B inserts another long and important passage, containing the confession of Sloth, and his regrets for his mis-spent youth; nearly 60 lines.

Lines 222—259. So in B, nearly.

Here B again inserts about 40 lines, concerning the Crucifixion and Resurrection of Christ.

Lines 260—263. So in B, nearly. But note, that Passus V. of text B does not terminate here.

PASSUS VI. This forms, in B, the concluding portion of Passus V.; the agreement is pretty close. However, there are some variations about ll. 36—38, 82—84, and line 97, and B has an extra line after l. 112.

After l. 126, B inserts four new lines.

PASSUS VII. Agrees substantially with B, Passus VI., but the occasional variations are very numerous. Observe, e. g. ll. 9—20, and the insertion of two lines after l. 40, of four lines after l. 46, of a line after l. 59, and of two lines after l. 65. Observe also the slight variations and insertions at ll. 128—139, l. 149, ll. 167—172, ll. 178—188, l. 190, ll. 212—215, ll. 238, 239, and after l. 301.

At the end of the Passus B adds 5 lines, containing a curious prophecy; see the Critical Notes, p. 147.

PASSUS VIII. Called Passus VII. in B.

Lines 1—72. In B, but there are numerous variations, best observed by actual comparison. It is worth noting that ll. 13—17 and 38—41 seem to be fuller and better expressed in the earlier version.

After l. 72, B inserts some 20 lines about Beggars.

Lines 73—187. In B, but with a few variations, e. g. at ll. 132, 147, 151, and 153—155.

PASSUS IX., or PROLOGUE TO DOWEL. Called Passus VIII. in B, and the two agree pretty closely.

B has four extra lines after l. 13, and five extra lines after l. 47, one extra line after l. 115, and two more lines at the end of the Passus.

PASSUS X., XI. Called in B Passus IX. and X. Here all close resemblance soon ceases, and the variations become numerous and important. Text B is far the fullest on the whole, but there are a few passages which are fuller and better expressed in the earlier version. Both versions are very good, and it would be a pity to lose or pass over either of them. Ll. 180—303 of Passus XI., for instance, are varied and expanded in B at great length, and it is here that we meet with the curious prophecy (a mere chance guess, but none the less notable) that a king should come, and amend monks and canons, and the abbot of Abingdon should have a knock of the king, and incurable should be the wound. Of all this there is, in Text A, no hint whatever.

Text C is much farther removed from Text A than B is, and as the variations between B and C will be pointed out hereafter, it is not necessary to say much about it here.
